DRY LAW TEST DUE ON BLAINE REPEAL MOVE

18th Amendment Faces Vote Within Next Few Weeks.

WET DEFEAT LOOMS BY HUGE MAJORITY

Antiprohibitionists Can Muster Only 10 Men, Is Forecast.

UNCERTAINTY VEILS SITUATION IN HOUSE

Tilson, From Moist District, Must Support Hoover as G. O. P. Leader.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

There will be a vote in the Senate on the question of repealing the eighteenth amendment within the next few weeks unless the wets back down.

It became apparent yesterday that the drys welcome the opportunity afforded by Senator Blaine's resolution and are moving to this end from two divergent schools of thought. Both schools would like to have the vote because of the impending enforcement reform program.

Mr. Blaine's resolution to repeal the amendment will, of course, be voted down, overwhelmingly so. With the appointment of one of the Senate's best wets as an ambassador, the retirement of another and the defeat of a third; in fact, it is doubtful if the wets will muster more than ten votes in the Senate.

Two Schools of Drys.

But there is one school of drys that wants the show-down on the theory that they will then be able to get the President's reform program through without any trouble. They would contend that opponents of this program are inconsistent.

"You have voted to retain the amendment," they would argue. "How can you now deny the President's enforcement plans?"

That other school of dry thought wants a vote on the Blaine resolution for an entirely different reason. It is this school that bids fair to wreck Mr. Hoover's program, to try and make him appear insincere, if not a potential wet, for even sponsoring such a program.

Other Group's Viewpoint.

It is this group's theory that before doing this it would not be a bad idea to establish the fact indisputably that they are dry.

Then there will be no labeling them as wets when they oppose the President's program.

It would be no fight between the wets and the drys, but one among the drys on the question of the best way to enforce the law.

It would be a fight apparently as to whether the present situation can be relieved by cleaning out the present enforcement personnel from top to bottom, as Senator Borah demanded, or whether it can be best accomplished by nullifying that provision of the Constitution that insures jury trials, as some senators contend the National Law Enforcement Commission's proposal for petty Federal courts would do.

Few Grains of Comfort.

The wets would hail this, of course, as they have been hailing recent developments, as a fine commentary on national prohibition, that after ten years of it the drys are divided on means to enforce it. But this hailing would be all the comfort the wets would get. They would be shown up as woefully, pathetically weak in the Senate.

But there is this certainty: For the first time since the amendment was enacted there will be a straight out vote on it in the Senate unless Senator Blaine backs down. It will even come out of the Senate judiciary committee with an adverse report.

There is no reason to believe that Mr. Blaine will back down. He has no misapprehensions as to the fate of his resolution, but he said as late as yesterday that he wanted a record vote.

Wets Never Urged Vote.

There have been countless resolutions looking to this straight out test between the wets and the drys presented in both houses. They have always been pigeon holed, but in so far as the Senate is concerned, it is because the wets never seriously pressed for a vote on them.

There is a somewhat different situation in the House. That body is probably dry 4 to 1, but the wets over there are clamoring for a vote that will stand the drys up in one line and the wets in another. Heretofore House leaders have paid no attention to their demands because they figured it would only be a waste of time.

But now there is a serious doubt as to whether they would look upon a vote as do the Senate drys. The congressional elections are coming on and while the House is indisputably

One Air Death Noted Every 169,944 Miles

Commercial Flights Had Even Less Fatalities, Report Shows.

(Associated Press.)

The human element again has been found to be the greatest cause of aircraft accidents.

Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, in making public yesterday the Federal accident report on civil aviation for the first six months of 1929, said that 59.04 per cent of accidents were laid to personnel.

His analysis of accidents in the civil field bore out the findings of the Army Air Corps and the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics in the military field.

Army pilots in 1928 were held responsible for 63 per cent of fatal injury accidents, while Navy fliers for the 1929 fiscal year were termed the cause of 74.6 per cent of fatal crashes.

Maj. Young noted a marked increase in the number of miles flown for each accident in civil aeronautics. In the six-month period for all classes of civil flying there was one fatal accident for every 442,430 miles flown.

For the like period in 1928 there was one fatal accident for each 169,944 miles flown. Accidents decreased in percentage in face of the fact that a total of 56,201,338 miles was flown by civil aircraft, more than three times as much as during the first six months of 1928.

GARAGE MASSACRE, YALE DEATH LINKED

GUN SEIZED IN MICHIGAN

New York, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—The "St. Valentine's Day massacre" in Chicago last year and the murder of Frankie Yale, who was "put on the spot" in Brooklyn in July, 1928, were linked today in a police report which indicated the bullets fired in both killings were from the same submachine gun.

Commissioner Grover A. Whalen made the announcement that he had received "startling information" from Chicago, where he had sent two of the New York Police Department's firearms experts with slugs taken from Frankie Yale's body.

The experts were to compare these slugs with those which killed the seven members of "Bugs" Moran's gang while they were lined up in the rear of a Chicago garage on February 14, 1929.

Commissioner Whalen said his information came from Dr. Herman Bundesen, Chicago coroner, and when his ballistic experts return he expects them to have "corroboration of the information which has just come to me by telephone.

"If they have," he added, "I shall probably make public some interesting and surprising news about a murder in Brooklyn."

The gun which the new clues indicate shot down the Brooklyn gang leader and was used in the Chicago massacre was seized in a raid in St. Joseph, Mich., a few weeks ago when a small arsenal belonging to Frankie Burke, Chicago gunman, was taken.

Since the slaughter St. Valentine's Day Burke has been sought unsuccessfully by Chicago police, who charge the gunman, dressed in a policeman's uniform, was implicated in the wholesale elimination of the seven members of the Moran gang.

New York police previously have declared that several racketeer slayings here have been the work of Chicago gunmen. The automobile from which Frankie Yale met his doom as he drove down a Brooklyn street, it was once brought out, bore an Illinois license.

More recently a police inspector charged that Ciro Terranova, erstwhile Bronx artichoke king, employed a Chicago gangster to kill Yale and

POLICE DEATH JURY SHUT IN OVERNIGHT

FULL PENALTY SOUGHT

After it had deliberated for four hours and failed to agree Justice Peyton Gordon in District Supreme Court at 6:30 o'clock last night ordered the jury which is deliberating on the fate of Alfred Scott Aldridge, colored, charged with the first-degree murder of Policeman Harry J. McDonald, locked up for the night. The Government has asked the imposition of the death penalty.

McDonald was slain in a gun battle on July 6 last. Albert Aldridge, brother of the man on trial, also was slain. Alfred Aldridge made his escape from the scene of the duel only to be apprehended several days later by members of the headquarters homicide squad.

Aldridge was the principal witness at yesterday's session of the trial. Taking the stand in his own defense the Negro declared that his brother had shot the policeman in order to prevent his return to Leavenworth Prison and other penal institutions in the United States, among the number enumerated being also the Massachusetts State Prison and the Deer Island Penitentiary.

Supporting his testimony that the brother had fired the fatal shots, the defendant told the jury that just before he and his brother had been arrested by McDonald on a charge of burglarizing a drug store that Albert had asserted he would die before he would go back to prison. The defendant also declared that when his brother fell from a bullet from the policeman's pistol he reached down and picked up the gun which witnesses said was found on him and from which the bullet that snuffed out the policeman's life had been fired.

Another witness of importance during the day was Sergt. John H. Fowler, firearms expert of the Police Department, who testified that the bullet which had killed Policeman McDonald was fired from the gun found in Alfred Aldridge's room following his arrest. The sergeant testified that the leaden pellet bore magazine scratches which showed it could not have been shot from any other gun.

SUBZERO COLD ADDS TO PERIL IN FLOOD AREA

Mercury Hits 42 Degrees Below While Snow Covers Midwest.

BLIZZARDS HAMPER TRAFFIC AND PLANES

NewLevee Breaks Spread Ruin and Suffering in Three States.

SCORE BELIEVED LOST ON WYOMING ROADS

Two Are Killed, One Badly Hurt in Blaze Caused From Overheated Stove.

Chicago, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Winter's cold and reckless hand wrote a story of distress across the Nation today.

Lands were inundated by swollen streams in Indiana, Illinois and Arkansas. The mercury plunged to 42 degrees below zero at International Falls, Minn. Heavy snow struck all of the Middle West and central Rocky Mountain region. Widespread blizzards hampered traffic and paralyzed air service.

Subzero and zero temperatures were the rule almost everywhere. Continuance of the severe cold was forecast for the North Central States tonight and Saturday. The Northwest, however, had a pleasant prediction of sharp rise in temperatures.

The Southwest and south portion of the Midwest were bearing the brunt of the loosed elements. The former, including the territory south and west of Kansas City, had a raging blizzard added to the protracted siege of snow and cold. The latter, including Arkansas and the southern sections of Illinois, Indiana and Missouri, was watching the ruination of lands by water.

Levee Breaks Spread Ruin.

Four new breaks in the levee of the St. Francis River near Bertig, Ark., increased the acreage under flood waters in the lower Mississippi Basin by 10,000. A 15-foot break in the levee of the White River near Decker, Ind., sent a 6-foot wall of water over Decker Township. Another break was feared 15 miles south of Vincennes.

At Big Lake, Mississippi County, Ark., water was pouring through a 300-foot crevice in the levee, and there, as elsewhere, farmers were battling to save their lands.

Scores Lost On Highways.

Casper, Wyo., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—More than a score of persons were unaccounted for late today, all of them believed to be lost along Wyoming's highways in the most severe winter the State has experienced in the last quarter century.

Because of paralyzed communication facilities, fears were held that many others, among them sheepherders, may have become lost with their flocks.

A party of six men, among them Martin Cahill, president of the United Mine Workers of Wyoming, were unaccounted for somewhere between Rock Springs and Superior. They left Superior last night.

A 12-inch snowfall is general over Wyoming, and motor travel has been virtually tied up by drifts. Temperatures in some sections had dropped so low that recording instruments were broken or failed to function. A

CITY EXPANSION PLAN OUTLINED BY COMMISSION

MEETING ADDRESSED BY POLLARD, RITCHIE

STATE HEADS PLEDGE THEIR COOPERATION

Population of 2,000,000 Is Forecast by Chief of Park Board.

Before a distinguished and enthusiastic assemblage that packed Constitution Hall, at Eighteenth and D streets northwest, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission last night outlined and discussed its plans for developing Greater Washington in the District and Virginia and Maryland environs.

Prior to the presentation of these extensive plans, a message from President Hoover was read, and Gov. Pollard of Virginia and Gov. Ritchie of Maryland addressed the audience, which included many high officials of the Federal, municipal, Virginia and Maryland governments, as well as park and planning experts of the American Civic Association and the National Society of Landscape Architects, who were meeting here expressly for viewing and studying the Greater Washington program.

Arthur A. Shurtleff, of the Landscape Architects Society, and Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, executive officer of the Park and Planning Commission, also spoke at the meeting, which was presided over by Frederic A. Delano, of Washington, the commission's chairman. Music was furnished by the United States Marine Band Orchestra.

Hoover Praises Group's Work.

In his message, which was read by J. S. Nichols, of Kansas City, member of the Park and Planning Commission, President Hoover expressed regret for his inability to attend the meeting, but lauded the work of the group.

"The creation by Congress in 1926 of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission," the message said, "is one of the fundamental steps taken in national recognition of our need and opportunity to build the most effective and most beautiful city in the world. Just as the minds of many men of diverse experience took part in the original planning of the city under President Washington, so it has been recognized by Congress that we should have the advantage of the diversity of skill and experience in this renaissance of the City of Washington through our new undertaking for the expansion and revision of our Capital City."

The Presidentd eclared President Washington was the founder of city planning, and commended its revival throughout the Nation.

States' Aid Appreciated.

In conclusion he declared: "It is our national ambition to make a great and effective city for the seat of our Government, with a dignity, character and symbolism truly representative of America. As a nation we have resolved that it shall be accomplished. To succeed in the fullest measure we have need for planning not only within the District of Columbia, but also for cooperation from the adjacent States. I greatly appreciate the presence here upon this mission of the leaders of both Virginia and Maryland."

Pledging the wholehearted cooperation of their States, Govs. Ritchie and

Santa Barbara, Calif., Jan. 17 (A.P.). The Superior Court today ordered the halt of psychoanalytical treatment being administered to Stanley McCormick, incompetent multimillionaire, and provided for the appointment of two more persons to his present board of three guardians.

The ruling climaxed differences between Mrs. Catherine McCormick, wife of the invalid, and his relatives—Harold McCormick, a brother, and Anita McCormick Blaine, a sister—which brought them into a lengthy court hearing last November and December.

The legal battle was precipitated by Mrs. McCormick, whose petition for removal of the present physicians, Dr. Edward J. Kempf, of New York, being employed at a salary of $120,000 a year, and Dr. William A. White, of Washington, was granted. A second petition, however, which sought removal of the brother and sister, the coguardians, was denied, and the

STIMSON, MACDONALD IN LONG CONFERENCE

Approval of Battleships as First on Parley Agenda Believed Reached.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, Jan. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald had a three-hour interview in No. 10 Downing street soon after the arrival of the American delegation this afternoon in the special train that brought them to London from the liner George Washington. While the American and English statesmen were talking Dino Grandi, foreign minister of Italy, arrived in London. Now only the French delegation is absent. Premier Andre Tardieu will come here Sunday and will visit MacDonald at Checquers, the country Downing street.

MacDonald and Stimson discussed the agenda of the conference, which has not yet been decided, and there is reason to infer that one point was settled—the desirability, if other powers agree, of discussing battleships at once because on this point alone an accord is assured.

Six-Year Accord Planned.

It is evident from remarks made by some of the Americans tonight that Mr. MacDonald also gave Mr. Stimson an outline of how the British propose to deal with the all-important questions lying outside the provisional Anglo-American parity arrangement. This outline has surprised the Americans.

It can be said that the British, faced by Japanese, French and Italian claims, have decided since Mr. MacDonald's visit to President Hoover that an attempt at one conference to bring about agreed naval ratios that shall end competition at sea is impossible.

They have substituted for this the aim of a six-year agreement to which the United States, Great Britain and Japan, and perhaps Italy, shall subscribe and which will be made possible by France agreeing, without any signature to a treaty, that her building program in the interval will not upset the arrangements reached between the other powers.

Later Parley to Go Further.

Then, this push against navalism successfully accomplished, the position will be consolidated and in another six years another conference may be able to carry the campaign further toward ultimate reduction as well as limitation or armaments. For the present, reduction, except in the practically agreed delay in battleship building, is considered here as impracticable, although eminently desirable. That is the goal.

Dwarfing the battleship question, which during the past two days has been made into a red herring across the trail of the really important issue now at stake, and even putting into temporary eclipse the Japanese difficulties which make it hard to solve the approximate Anglo-American cruiser accord, is the problem of the aim of this conference upon which Stimson and MacDonald promptly got to grips.

The American delegation arrived here without any precise knowledge of how the British propose to deal with the most important problems before the conference. Hence, the

BISHOP B.D. TUCKER, OF VIRGINIA, IS DEAD

Veteran Head of Southern Diocese, 83 Years Old, Was Widely Known.

SUCCUMBS AT NORFOLK

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—The Right Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, Bishop of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, one of the best known Episcopal churchmen in the South, died at a local hospital tonight at the age of 83 years.

Bishop Beverley Tucker was born in Richmond, Va., the son of Nathaniel Beverley and Jane Shelton Tucker. He was educated in England and Switzerland and at the University of Toronto. He attended Alexandria (Va.) Theological Seminary and was graduated in 1873. He received his degree of doctor of divinity at Roanoke College.

He married Miss Anna Maria Washington, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John Augustine Washington, of Mount Vernon, July 22, 1873, the same year that he was ordained a deacon in the Episcopal Church. He was consecrated a priest in 1875. He served in the Virginia Artillery of the Confederate Army through the Civil War and wrote a number of Confederate memorial verses and essays. He also was the author of "My Three Loves," a book of verses, published in 1910.

The young priest's first charge was at Richmond County, Va., where he was rector from 1873 to 1882, when he was transferred to St. Paul's Church, Norfolk, where he served until October 3, 1906, when he was consecrated bishop-coadjutor of southern Virginia of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

U.S.-BRITISH SPLIT FORECAST IN PARIS

OTHER CONFLICTS SEEN

Paris, Jan. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The French anticipate complete disagreement at the London conference between the United States and Great Britain on the question of the abolition of battleships, suggested by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald. The American delegates are expected to announce immediate opposition to the British premier's proposal, which is strongly approved here.

The semiofficial Temps argues: "Capital ships, constituting offensive armament par excellence, should logically be the first to undergo cuts or total suppression before considering limitation of the essentially defensive means by which nations must meet the bare needs of their security."

Anglo-American divergences on other points are foreseen in Paris, notably on the subject of the maximum tonnage of battleships, while difficulties with Japan are anticipated on account of the latter's demand for a 70 ratio in relation to the British and American cruiser fleets. Le Temps thinks the United States, which was prepared to accept 18 10,000-ton American cruisers against 15 British ones, will insist on having 21 or 23 if Japan maintains her claims.

Conflict is also seen between the London and Tokyo viewpoints concerning the suppression of battleships or reduction in the number of submarines. All of which is invoked in protest against the opinions expressed elsewhere that the chief danger to the London parley is conflict between France and Italy on the latter's demand for parity with her more powerful neighbor.

While insisting there is no possible comparison between Anglo-American naval parity—considered to ex-

The "Old Soak," Secretary of State's ribald aged Philippine parrot, yesterday fell from grace and was transferred from palatial quarters in the beautiful patio of the Pan-American Building, where he had been moved pending Mr. Stimson's return from the London naval conference, to the cellar.

"Old Soak's" trouble was not that he has psittacosis, or "parrot's fever," but that the old fellow's language became too bad for the refined surroundings of the Pan-American Union gardens.

His "good mornings," which he used at the Stimson's home here, were interspersed now and then with "Hell's bells" and that common word "damn." It is known in State Department cir-

Abolition Report Garbled.

The scheme for a six-year agreement is definite, however. It was stated as the utmost possible achievement by the highest authority in a statement to the world press at the foreign office Wednesday, although the significance of the words used escaped most of those present.

Instead, the correspondents seized upon the expression of the present Labor government's hostility to battleships and ignored a parenthetical remark that naval experts were not agreed on this.

American excitement over the alleged proposal to abolish battleships, which upset the delegates on the George Washington when conveyed in garbled and inaccurate wireless, therefore missed the implied reservation that the admiralty opposes this almost as strongly as the Navy Department at Washington. But if the Americans choose to place themselves in the position of supporting big battleships, the admiralty, so long as it is assured that these ships won't be abolished, has no objection to Mr. MacDonald claiming credit for wishing to wipe them off the seas and pointing to others as the obstacles.

Explanation Brings Relief.

The American party was clearly relieved to learn, contrary to the impression conveyed to the boat by wireless, that battleship abolition was a pious hope expressed on behalf of the Labor ministers against the opinions of the admiralty, rather than a serious proposal for this conference. The Americans expressed themselves as in accord with the British desire to postpone the whole subject for six years without building any more battleships and taking that problem up again after an interval during which the Washington and London naval experts, who are quarreling among themselves about the use or uselessness of big battleships, can come to some agreement at home as to what they want before they begin argument with foreigners.

The first impression of the American views which I gathered on the George Washington in Plymouth Harbor at an unearthly hour this morning, on the special boat train, and after Mr. Stimson had seen Mr. MacDonald, are necessarily fragmentary; but they lead me to the belief that the Americans are somewhat disappointed at the British view that only a six-year agreement, applying not only to battleships but to cruisers or any other classes of ships, can be hoped for in London in 1930.

Year "X" Is Factor.

Some Americans seem to feel that larger hopes have been aroused and that disappointment will result if this is all that is done. It will be Mr. MacDonald's task to try to convince them that, in the present mood of the continentals and Japanese and considering the British admiralty's insistence that decisions taken here must be reviewed in a comparatively short time, no more can be expected and that half a loaf is better than no bread.

The admiralty will insist upon its pound of flesh and, as previously cabled, there is strong reason to believe that Mr. MacDonald, on behalf of the government, has given a pledge that nothing binding in the way of limitation will be imposed upon the British navy for a period longer than that which will permit more ships to be built if necessary for the year "X," the secret date when the committee on imperial defense has decided is the last year when peace between the great powers can now be assumed to be certain.

In order to make necessary preparations for the year "X" the admiralty insists that in 1936 the whole position must be reviewed in the light of the situation at that time, and French refusal to either sign any agreement or to make any promise that will extend more than six years as to a building program is expected.

The Italian delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, installed itself tonight at Calridge's and did no talking for publication.

Private Views Are Strong.

Neither did Secretary of State Stimson, although he indulged in some banter with hundreds of reporters at the Ritz Hotel, where the three floors occupied by the Americans are now guarded by United States Marines, whose advent was hailed in headlines by those London newspapers which did not choose, instead, to specialize upon the beauties and alleged superabundant make-up of the American delegation's stenographers.

Privately, the Italians expressed themselves in extremely strong terms, stating that their claim to complete parity with France in all classes will be maintained to the utmost. One member of the delegation said that any Italian here who wavered on this article of faith could never return to Rome.

The Japanese at Grosvenor House were inclined to resent publication of the fact that they are obstacles to Anglo-American accord on the basis of eighteen 10,000-ton American cruisers to fifteen British. They seem to have dug themselves in on their demand for a 7-to-10 ratio, and it is assumed that MacDonald repeated to Stimson his suggestion to former Premier Wakatsuki that the Americans and Japanese settle this dispute between themselves.

Americans Given Welcome.

The American delegates suffered a stormy day at the end of their voyage and Mr. Stimson's desire to reach London this morning for at least four hours with Mr. MacDonald before he saw anyone else was disappointed, although the premier, when he learned the boat was late, cancelled other engagements and gave the whole afternoon to the Secretary of State when the boat train arrived.

Plymouth Harbor was rough this morning. The tender which put out at 6:30 a. m., tossed about wildly and took half an hour to get alongside the George Washington.

There was no delay after landing in Plymouth. The address of the lord mayor, supported by the corporation and four gold maces, to which Stimson replied, expressing "high hopes" and promising "earnest endeavors" to make the conference a success, didn't delay the boat train, as the ceremony took place while the baggage was being unloaded from the tender.

GRANDI OPTIMISTIC ON CONFERENCE EVE

Italian Foreign Minister Is Hopeful, Despite Failure of Paris Agreement.

SPEAKS FOR MUSSOLINI

London, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Despite the failure of France and Italy to reach a preliminary agreement for limitation of their naval armaments, optimism prevailed in the Italian delegation to the five-power naval conference tonight. It was inspired by the confidence of Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, who arrived today from Geneva.

The foreign minister, just over 30 years of age and the youngest of the delegates assembled here, is full of hope that the cause supported by President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald will ultimately triumph and thus further strengthen the Kellogg antiwar pact, insure peace to the world, and lighten the financial burdens of all countries.

Those conversant with Italian affairs know that the views of Grandi are synonymous with those of Premier Mussolini, whose right-hand man he is.

Italians feel that ample proof of Italy's aspirations for peace is afforded by Grandi's avowed willingness to reduce armaments to an extreme limit, placing only the condition that other powers do so proportionately. This means that he is ready to accept limitation of Italian naval forces to any figure, however low, but will refuse to accept any solution which places Italy in a position of permanent inferiority to any other continental European power.

Grandi would prefer that only total naval tonnage be fixed, leaving each country free to distribute it among the various classes of war craft as each thinks best. He is ready, however, to discuss limitation of each category of ships as well as suppression of submarines, provided all countries do the same.

Members of the Italian delegation do not find acceptable the recent suggestion of France that Italo-French parity apply only to the French Mediterranean fleet. They believe that if France were left free to develop forces in the Atlantic which could be rushed into the Mediterranean in time of need Italy would have an equal claim to building up a force in the Adriatic to be used in the same way.

The Lotus Restaurant is located at this address.

The plaintiff, through Attorneys Jamieson & Ward, tells the court that she was dancing in the restaurant shortly after the New Year had been welcomed when a guest discharged a pistol. The bullet, she claims, entered her leg and emerged from her foot. In addition, she states, she was badly burned by the discharge of the weapon.

The plaintiff also asserts that it was the duty of the proprietors of the restaurant to see that she was not subject to such promiscuous discharge of firearms. She also asserts that no effort was made to eject any guest who had firearms in his possession.

Rothstein Indictments Are Dismissed by Court

New York, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—The indictment against Hyman Biller, charging first-degree murder in the shooting of Arnold Rothstein on November 4, 1928, was dismissed today upon recommendation of Thomas C. T. Crain, district attorney. Two murder indictments against "John Doe" and "Richard Roe" also were dismissed.

Mr. Crain said that evidence adduced before the grand jury and during the recent trial of George McManus, acquitted on a charge of murdering Rothstein, was not sufficient to warrant the indictments.

Pilot Killed, One Hurt In Plunge of Airplane

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—An airplane crashed at South Jacksonville late today, causing fatal injuries to its pilot, Emanuel S. Margulies, Newark, N. J., and serious injuries to his companion, V. E. Moon, of Maplewood, N. J. Witnesses said the plane had appeared to be in bad shape before the crash, having topped several trees, its motor missing badly.

The fliers were en route from Miami where they had taken part in an air meet earlier in the week to Newark. Margulies was a wealthy real estate dealer in New Jersey. He received a private pilot's license January 7.

SENATE KILLS PLAN FOR SUGAR BOUNTY

Howell Proposal Is Defeated, Despite Western Bloc, by 54 to 22.

HIGHER LEVY IS HINTED

After being notified that advocates of a higher sugar tariff would carry on their drive despite Thursday's defeat, the Senate went on record yesterday, by a vote of 54 to 22, against granting a direct Federal bounty to domestic sugar growers and manufacturers.

Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, revealed at the outset of the day's proceedings that before the tariff bill is finally passed upon by the Senate he would propose an increase to 2 cents in the existing levy of 1.76 cents a pound on Cuban raw sugar. The present duty was approved Thursday by a vote of 48 to 38 in preference to 2.20 cents, as recommended by the finance committee, and 2.40 cents carried in the House measure.

The bounty amendment, proposed by Senator Howell (Republican Independent), Nebraska, gained the support of only sixteen Western Republicans, five Southern and Western Democrats, and the one Farmer-Labor senator, Shipstead, of Minnesota. Thirty Republicans and 24 Democrats voted against it.

Estimated Cost, $10,600,000.

The Howell proposal would have provided a bounty of 44-hundredths of a cent a pound to growers and refiners in continental United States, with 90 per cent going to the grower. The estimated cost to the Government was $10,600,000 a year.

Rejection of the bounty paved the way for completion of action on committee amendments to the entire sugar schedule. This was accomplished late in the day after two amendments to increase duties on edible and blackstrap molasses failed. Today debate will continue on contested amendments to the papers and books schedule.

In notifying the Senate that he would ask a separate vote on the sugar tariff, Senator Smoot took exception to newspaper comment by Orestes Ferrara, the Cuban Ambassador, on Thursday's vote, and accounts relating that a toast to the Senate was drunk at the embassy.

Joy in Cuba Mentioned.

"I want to call attention to the fact," the Utahan said, "that there was great joy in Cuba yesterday after the Senate voted. At the Cuban Embassy here a toast was drunk to the Senate. A statement was given out by Ambassador Ferrara in which he said the vote was 'the first step toward a more intimate commercial relation between the United States and Cuba.'

"I want to call attention to the fact that there was no toast drunk by the people of the United States who are going to lose all they have invested in the sugar industry."

Senator Norris, Republican independent, Nebraska, said he understood the toast was drunk by "somebody representing the consumers who were glad that they had been relieved of the $54,000,000 tax which the Senate finance committee was proposing."

Harrison Makes Thrust.

Senator Smoot agreed that Ferrara was a consumer, but expressed doubt that the ambassador could consume that amount of sugar.

Asking Senator Smoot why he had not called attention to editorials praising the Senate's vote against a higher tariff, Senator Harrison, (Democrat), Mississippi, said:

"The senator from Utah ought not to die so hard."

"I'm not dying hard at all and the senator from Mississippi knows it," the Westerner replied.

Prison Riot Leader, Fifth Man, Hanged

California Convict Goes to His Death Smoking Cigarette.

Folsom Prison, Calif., Jan. 17 (A.P.). Eugene Crosby, alias James Gleason, was hanged here today for his participation in the Folsom Prison riot on Thanksgiving Day, 1927. He walked to the gallows smoking a cigarette and refused religious solace. Crosby was the fifth of a group of six alleged ringleaders of the riot to be executed.

Walter Burke, Roy E. Stokes, Anthony Brown and James H. Gregg, all convicts, recently were executed. The case of Albert M. Stewart, the sixth, is before the State Supreme Court of Appeals. Stewart has asked the judge who sentenced him to arrange for him to hang within fifteen days, as he could not stand the "wracking suspense."

The six were specifically charged with slaying a convict, George Baker, one of the eleven men killed in the riot.

$26,268 LOBBY FUND IS REVEALED AT QUIZ

ADJOURNMENT IS TAKEN

An expenditure by New York importers of $26,268 in connection with the pending tariff bill was disclosed to the Senate lobby committee yesterday as it finished that phase of its investigation and prepared to turn Tuesday to an inquiry into the American Tariff League.

Prior to the week-end adjournment testimony was heard from Harry S. Radcliffe, New York velvet fabrics importer, that the velvet group of the National Council of American Importers and Traders, Inc., had spent $16,800 in advocating lower rates in the tariff bill.

In addition, Philip le Boutillier, president of Best & Co., of New York, and chairman of the public committee of the importers council, testified that a publicity bureau, had been employed to handle "news releases" at a cost of $5,676. He also told the committee the National Retail Dry Goods Association had spent $3,792 in connection with the tariff.

Mr. Radcliffe said that as chairman of the velvet group he had appeared before the congressional committees handling tariff legislation, and that an attorney had been employed, for $15,000, to prepare briefs for submission to Congress.

He estimated the total expenses of the tariff campaign would be about $20,800.

Mr. Le Boutillier said the publicity bureau employed had sent a questionnaire to about 1,000 economists to obtain their opinions on the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill and that 9 per cent of the 30 replies received expressed opposition to administrative provisions of the bill.

W. W. Barbour, president of the American Tariff League, and Arthur L. Faubel, secretary, both of New York, were summoned yesterday by the committee to appear Tuesday for questioning about their tariff activities.

Dry Order Is Entered Against Two Buildings

Justice Alfred A. Wheat in District Supreme Court yesterday signed an order restraining owners and occupants of premises at 2520 and 2524 K street northwest, from violating in any way the prohibition laws pending the final disposal of a suit for a permanent injunction.

Rose and Mary Byrne are named as the owners of the premises, which are improved with three and two-story structures, respectively. Clarence Swartz, William Niland and Fanny Warring are designated as the occupants. Charge is made in the petition that the places are "public and common nuisances," and that the condition has existed since November 15 last.

Aid to Merchants Is Seen In Opportunity Campaign

Post $20,000 Distribution Offers Retailers Chance to Convey Their Sales Messages at Time of Great Reader Interest.

"Where were you yesterday?" a chorus of voices greeted Old Man Opportunity as he entered the city room last evening. His clothes were neatly pressed, a black derby was perched at a jaunty angle over his left eye and a long black cigar was tilted upward nearly to the brim.

Pearl gray spats peeped modestly from below the cuff of his trousers, and his carefully combed beard was parted sufficiently on the left to reveal a pink carnation in the lapel of his coat. All in all, he looked quite the "duke."

"Why," he replied, "I have been knocking on a different type of door. Conveying a little different type of message, although it is intimately related to The Post $20,000 Opportunity Campaign."

"I have been talking to the merchants of the city and explaining what a great aid this campaign can be to their business if they use The Post to present their sales messages. The wide-awake fellows I have, of course, met before, but I always enjoy revisiting those who are alert for my knock."

"But why the trick costume?" some one ventured. "Is it a disguise?"

"On the contrary," returned Old Joe. "I have been visiting a number of the feminine population and they only recognize me in garments befitting my position as the prophet of good fortune.

"You see, many of them have had the impression that my offer of automobiles, radios and cash commissions, in exchange for a little part-time effort, was confined to the masculine sex and I have had to point out to them the many distinctive advantages that a woman has in a contest of this kind."

"'In other words, if she has a nice face she can run it into a nice figure,' suggested some one whose identity was immediately lost under a barrage of old rubbers and other odds and ends that the janitor always carefully sweeps around.

"Well she can 'figure' on making enough to pay for a fine course of beauty treatments or one of those electrical reducing gadgets if she thinks she needs one or the other," replied "Joe."

(Note how familiar we are getting with Old Man Opportunity. Yeh! Call him by his first name and everything but it doesn't get us anything because employes of The Post are barred from taking part in this great contest.)

"There is just one thing I would like you fellows to make clear," continued the old man, "and that is, that in this contest, which is just starting, 'everyone wins' in direct relation to the effort put into it."

"I'll bid you good night now, boys. I've decided that what this country really needs is a good five-cent cigar. * * * lighter. I'm going to look for a man that can make one."

USE OF CAR REFUSED TO HERMAN BRADY

CALLS BROTHER INNOCEN

While detectives were determinedly laboring yesterday to place responsibility for the New Year's Day bombing at Seat Pleasant on Lawrence Leroy Brady, 26, Washington automobile mechanic, Herman Brady, 22, his brother and widower of Naomi Hall Brady, 18, who was killed in the bomb explosion, was making plans to visit his mother-in-law, Mrs. Nora Hall, 46, at Providence Hospital.

Herman, who is at liberty on $1,000 bond as a State's witness, visited the office of Sheriff Charles S. Early in Upper Marlboro yesterday in an effort to secure the release of Leroy's automobile, which has been held by police since his arrest two weeks ago. The car was found to have a hidden compartment under the floor boards and police at first attached some importance to this discovery, but later discountde its value. Sheriff Early, however, refused to permit Herman to remove the car yesterday from Pumphrey's Garage in Meadows.

The sheriff said that his refusal had no particular significance, but that he wished to hold the car for a few days until it was determined that it had no bearing on the case.

Brady Talks to Reporter.

As he left the sheriff's office, Herman stopped to talk to a reporter for The Washington Post. He said that he had wanted to visit his brother, but that only Leroy's mother and wife could visit him at the jail, where he was committed without bond on a charge of murder Thursday after a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace H. W. Gore.

He declared that he believed his brother innocent of the bombing. He said that he had gone with Naomi since she was 9 years old and that he loved her sincerely. Leroy had no motive for wishing the death of Naomi, Herman said.

He denied that he had said "If Leroy will tell the story, he will put me on the street," to detectives. "What I said, he declared, "was, that if Leroy was guilty, he could tell them that I knew nothing about it. I didn't mean that I though he had done it. What reason would he have? He didn't object to my marrying Naomi."

Describes His Feelings.

"Theey said that he was trying to defend the family honor. How could that be when this affair has dragged my mistake before the whole world? I admit that I made a mistake, but I tried to make it right by marrying Naomi. It wasn't that I didn't love her. I just made a mistake," he continued.

"I am the one who suffered most by the bombing. I lost my wife and had my mistake dragged out. They tried to make a lot of my putting back our marriage date. Anybody would have doen that to protect the name of his wife," Herman said.

He told of having been making arrangements to rent a house where he could take his wife and her expected baby and of hearing that she had been hurt.

Explosion Is Mentioned.

"They told me that there had been an explosion and that Naomi was hurt. I tried to get there in a hurry, but my car broke down. The connecting rod broke and crashed through both sides. I was late getting there. I knew it was Naomi who was dead when they told me that one of the women was dead, because I had found out that her mother was alive.

Herman said that he could not see why so much importance was attached to his and Leroy's having gone on a duck hunt the day the fatal package containing the bomb was delivered. "We went on Sunday all the time," he said. "That was the only day we had off and boats didn't scare the ducks on that day. Everybody down there hunts ducks on Sundays."

He said that he could not see the importance of the tags found on his porch as he had often found old tags there. People who changed their tags would leave them and Leroy would carry them in his car and throw them out, Herman said.

QQuestioned As to Dynamite.

"Why, they even tried to say I had something to do with the bombing," he said. "They asked me if I had any dynamite and I told them I had not because I gave it all to my uncle. When they found a half keg of blasting powder at my house they talked to me terrible. They hadn't asked about powder. We used it to split logs. But why should they suspect me? I lost the most of all in the explosion."

He said that he believed his brother was innocent but could think of no one who would have reason to want to inflict such a terrible thing on Naomi. Herman said that he had been very friendly with the Halls and that they had known of the marriage. His own mother hadn't been told, though, he said, as he planned on keeping his marriage secret until he was ready to set up his own establishment.

The man whose farm he rented had agreed to have a house ready for him by Christmas but had not done so and he had found that he would have to rent a house until spring.

He had been on such friendly terms with the Halls that he had stayed at their house several nights although he couldn't do this often. "You know, we have to get up pretty early on the farm and their house is 14 miles away."

He said that he had made arrangements with Norris Hall, brother of Naomi, to meet him last night and go to the hospital and visit Mrs. Hall, who is recovering from serious injuries received when the bomb exploded. Hospital authorities said last nigh that they did not believe he had been there although it was possible that he had arrived before the night shift went on duty.

Baltimore and county detectives yesterday spent most of the day running down a number of small leads but said last night that they had accomplished nothing of a sensational nature. They will continue their work today.

Defense counsel said yesterday that they have not decided upon whether or not they wil ask a writ of habeas corpus.

TRUST DOMINATION SEEN IN RADIO FIELD

Patent Situation Is Termed "Intolerable" Before Senate Committee.

KWKH DISCUSSED ANEW

(Associated Press.)

Forging ahead with hearings on the Couzens communications bill, the Senate interstate commerce committee heard testimony yesterday that the patent situation in the radio industry was becoming intolerable.

The witness was B. J. Grigsby, president of the Chicago firm of Grigsby-Grunow Co., which manufactures radio sets. He said a radio combine was seeking to dominate the industry and create a monopoly.

Meanwhile, on the floor of the Senate another outburst occurred in the controversy over language broadcast over KWKH, the "Hello world" radio station at Shreveport, La., operated by W. K. Henderson.

Senator Blease (Democrat), South Carolina, called attention to a newspaper article which stated Henderson had agreed not to use objectionable words. He read several telegrams, one of which said many persons were enjoying Henderson's talks.

After Blease sat down, Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, who first voiced complaint on the floor, reentered the debate with a denial that he was opposed to Henderson because of his opposition to chain stores.

"I have really done a service to those who want to fight chain stores," he said, "because if Henderson continued to use objectionable language he would be ruled off the air."

In his testimony before the committee, Grigsby named the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Co., the Westinghouse Co. and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. as members of what he said was sometimes called the Radio Trust.

He contended that his firm had been compelled to pay royalties of more than $5,000,000, which, he said, represented an ultimate cost to the consumer of $15,000,000, by virtue of the fact that he had been obliged to take out patent licenses from the Radio Corporation. He added that his bankers would not finance his concern unless it had the licenses.

The corporation, he continued, fixed the royalty rate at 7½ per cent on receipts "on the pretense that it had a complete monopoly."

"That is not true," he said. "We are now paying royalties to three other patent owners and have been sued by five additional companies, claiming infringement of seven patents."

POLICE SLAYING JURY LOCKED UP FOR NIGHT

case to the jury, pointed out that previous testimony had been to the effect that when Albert Aldridge was lifted into an ambulance he was found to be clutching a gun which had not been discharged. "How could he have shot the policeman with a pistol which had not been fired?" he asked.

Confession Repudiated.

Attorney James Reilly, who is defending the accused, told the jury that there was more than an element of possible doubt, pointing out that his client had repudiated an alleged confession introduced by the Government, and that he maintained that his brother had fired the fatal shot.

The case has been on trial since Tuesday, and in its earlier session was featured by the collapse of Mrs. Alice McDonald, widow of the slain policeman. Mrs. McDonald fainted on the witness stand when called upon to identify a bullet found in the automobile her husband was driving on the morning he was mortally wounded. The bullet, the Government alleges, is the one which caused the policeman's death and which it is claimed was fired from the pistol found in the home of the accused.

McDonald, according to early testimony, had apprehended the two Aldridges at Seventeenth and Q streets northwest on a charge of suspicion growing out of a report that they had entered a drug store. The two Negroes are alleged to have gone with McDonald in his automobile to the nearest call box and while alighting from it to have opened fire on him.

Albert Aldridge died a few hours after the pistol duel while the policeman lingered for several days.

Fog Hampers Ships at Hamburg.

Berlin, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Traffic in the port of Hamburg and the lower reaches of the Elbe was almost paralyzed today by a dense fog which spread inland from the North Sea. There were several collisions between steamers. The British Tiara went ashore off the German Shipyards Co.'s premises, but was expected to be refloated with the help of tugs.

PACKERS' CASE GOES TO DISTRICT COURT

Department of Justice Asks Dismissal of Petition on Consent Decree.

SENATE TALKS MATTER

(Associated Press.)

Arguments for modification of the consent decree restraining packers from doing grocery or retail business will be heard by the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

The Department of Justice asked the court yesterday to dismiss the petitions of Swift & Co. and Armour & Co. that the 1920 decree be altered.

The packers filed their plea for modification last August and the Justice Department had never announced its position. The move yesterday would have the effect of requiring the packers to establish the justice of their request, after which, the department said, it would decide its position.

Senate Discusses Case.

After the Government's petition for dismisal had been filed, the packers' effort to obtain modification was brought up in the Senate. Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, offered a resolution calling on Attorney General Mitchell to inform the Senate concerning the application. It was referred to the agricultural committee after Senator Deneen (Republican), Illinois, objected to its immediate consideration. Deneen said later he objected because he had been informed the Attorney General had acted concerning the application.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, said he had received many protests against any change in the decree. Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, placed in the record a letter written in 1918 to the late President Wilson by Herbert Hoover in which the latter was quoted as saying that there was a "growing and dangerous domination of the handling of the Nation's food supply."

Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, expressed the opinion that the consent decree amounted to the enactment of a law.

"The Attorney General ought not to consent to modification," he said, "unless he is willing to admit that a law of the same effect ought to be changed."

Chicago, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Informed of the Department of Justice request that suits seeking modification of the packers consent decree be dismissed, F. Edson White, president of Armour & Co., issued the following statement:

"It is our understanding that the Government's answer will result in a court hearing on the merits of our contention. We can show that economic changes which have taken place in the last decade warrant us in asking for opportunity to utilize our distributive facilities to better advantage than is now possible, thereby benefiting both producer and consumer, and, furthermore, justice requires that we have the same rights that are accorded to competitors and to other business enterprises in general.

"We are confident that when the court has heard the evidence it will modify the decree in accord with our petition."

Two Pay Roll Holdups In Chicago Net $7,000

Chicago, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Two daylight pay-roll holdups netted robbers more than $7,000 today.

Bank messengers were forced to turn over to five men in an automobile the $4,228 pay roll of a motor car company. Another $2,812 pay roll for a printing company was taken from Rudolph Dumbrow, cashier. Two robbers forced him into the elevator, caused it to be stopped between floors, stripped him of his coat and overcoat and ordered the operator to carry the cashier to the top floor while they escaped.

WOMAN REVERSES CHILD DEATH CLAIM

Gladys May Parks Now Says Two Men Did Not Aid in Killing Boy and Girl.

FIRST STORY REPEATED

Camden, N. J., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Gladys May Parks, on trial for murder, today took the witness stand and fought to free herself of the charges that she killed two motherless children who had been placed in her care.

She had given conflicting statements regarding the death of Dorothy Rogers, 4 years old, and Timothy Rogers, 2. In two of them she had accused Judge Joseph A. Corio, of Atlantic City, of the murder of Timothy, and charged her brother-in-law, Earl Farr, with being an accessory after the fact, but today she took back all she had said about the two men. Her reason for accusing them, she testified on cross-examination, was that the prosecutor's office would give her no rest and to stop the ceaseless questioning and have the detectives follow another trail she involved Corio and Farr.

In her direct examination Miss Parks stood on her first statement regarding the death of the children. She declared that Dorothy had died after a whipping for committing an indiscretion and that Timothy had met death from an accidental fall down stairs. To this she stuck through her cross-examination. She admitted she disposed of the bodies, the girl in a brush at National Park, and the boy in a thicket at Absecon, because she had no money to bury them properly and also because she did not want it to become known they had died.

Early in the day Judge Corio took the witness stand and denied he had anything to do with the death of Timothy. He said he had not seen Miss Parks since 1926, when he refused to handle a small estate case for her and her sister because she said he had sold out to the opposing lawyer. He had ordered her out of his office.

Judge Corio traced his movements throughout the day and night of August 22 last when Miss Parks had said he had choked Timothy to death in her Camden home. He was not away from Atlantic City on that day.

Several other witnesses corroborated him.

Earl Farr also took the witness stand and denied the statements of Miss Parks that he visited her on the night of August 22, discovered what had occurred and took Miss Parks to Absecon with the body of Timothy, where she disposed of it.

SAME GUN BLAMED IN GANG MURDERS

Frank Marlow, who was "taken for a ride" on Long Island.

Terranova is now free under bail, charged with complicity in a hold-up staged last month at a dinner given in honor of Magistrate Albert Vitale. Police charge that Terranova, alleged Bronx underworld boss, engineered the hold-up to obtain a killer's contract from a Chicago gunman, who was a guest at the dinner.

The contract, the police inspector has charged, was signed by Terranova and called for the slaying of Yale and Marlow in return for a $20,000 fee.

In the original Yale murder investigation, it was hinted that the Brooklyn racketeer was killed in reprisal for taking part in the Dion O'Banion and other Chicago gangster slayings.

Commissioner Whalen told reporters tonight he had conferred with Police Commissioner William Russell, of Chicago, by telephone, and the latter stated he was convinced Yale was killed by a machine gun used in the St. Valentine's Day massacre. The weapon once belonged to Al Capone, Mr. Whalen said.

Experts Are Silent.

Chicago, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Coroner Herman M. Bundesen, at whose suggestion the bullets that killed Frank Yale, New York gangster, were brought here for examination, refused comment today on the announcement in New York that the bullets probably were fired from the same machine gun that was used in a Chicago gang massacre eleven months ago.

Both Dr. Bundesen and Col. Calvin Goddard, ballistic expert who conducted the examination, said the report was made to the New York police and any announcement would come from them.

EXCEPTIONS ASKED IN SHIPSTEAD BILL

Lands Adjoining Rock Creek Park Should Have No Restrictions, Is Report.

OPINION IS SENT CAPPER

The proposed restrictions on private buildings abutting public lands in the District, contained in the Shipstead bill, should not include private lands abutting on Rock Creek Park, the Zoological Park or the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway the District Commissioners told the Senate yesterday in a report on the Shipstead bill sent to Senator Arthur Capper, chairman of the Senate District committee.

"It is the opinion of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia," it was said in the report, "that as a general rule the right of an individual to make such lawful use of his property as he sees fit, with due regard to the rights of others, should be restricted and regulated as little as is consistent with the public health, safety, comfort and general welfare."

There was good reason to restrict the development of private building abutting the Mall development and "perhaps to a lesser extent" to building abutting the Capitol grounds and Potomac Park, the Commissioners said, adding:

"With respect to Rock Creek Park, the Zoological Park, and the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, the justification, in the opinion of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, is not so clear. These cover large and extended areas, bordered in good part by steep and wooded hillsides, and the danger of any adverse effect upon the public health, safety and general welfare, or upon the public values of these parks and parkways through unsupervised building on the private lands fronting upon them, or upon streets bordering them, appears not to be of sufficient importance to justify placing upon the use of these private lands any further restrictions than are imposed by existing building and zoning regulations."

Passage of the bill as they proposed it be amended was favored.

LORTON YOUTH FLEES TO VISIT ILL MOTHER

down to bury his head in tears beside the mother, Mrs. Cora Passman, of 1015 N street northwest.

At 8 o'clock last night Second Precinct Policemen W. J. Rice and J. M. Frayne sought out the boy, Archibald Lyles, tapped him gently on the shoulder as he sat beside the bed. Lyles, a little boy yet to his mother despite his 20 years, leaned over with a farewell kiss and silently walked out of the room to a cell in the precinct station to await arrival of Reformatory officers to take him back to the institution where the other youth, James J. McLaughlin, the same age, awaits him.

Barely six months of their three-year sentence upon conviction here of larceny charges have gone by, yet the rest does not matter, for the boy reveled in the smile of a mother on the road to health once more.

ELDERLY MAN HELD AS CAPITAL FUGITIVE

U. S. Attorney Says George B. Sinclair Was Indicted Here Six Years Ago.

ESTATE FRAUD CHARGED

New York, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—A gray-haired, shabbily dressed but scholarly appearing man of 60-odd years, and said to be a former North Carolina judge, was arrested today charged with being a fugitive from justice from Washington, D. C.

Arraigned as George Herman Sinclair, alias Thomas Sinclair, alias John F. Johnston, wanted in Washington on a nine-year-old indictment charging embezzlement of funds from the State of Cephas Hempstead Sinclair, a relative, the man denied he was the Sinclair sought.

Taken to the House of Detention after being held for a hearing January 22 in removal proceedings, he requested a copy of the charges against him and asked for several law books. He said he would plead his own case.

Assistant United States Attorney Andrew J. McLean said he had been told Sinclair was a former judge in Charlotte, N. C., at one time a leader of the bar in that State.

He said Sinclair was the executor of the estate of Cephas Sinclair and had made away with over $40,000 in cash and stock belonging to the estate.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Records of courts gave no confirmation today of reports from New York that George Herman Sinclair, arrested there on a charge of embezzlement, formerly was a judge here. Lawyers and magistrates said they did not recall a former judge by that name.

Following receipt of information that George Herman Sinclair had been apprehended in New York, United States Attorney Leo A. Rover announced that a George Burnley Sinclair was indicted here on March 15, 1923, on charges of embezzling $42,197.89 from the estate of Cephas Hempston Sinclair. At that time, it was said, the man under indictment was executor of the estate. Since the date the indictment was returned, it is understood, the man has been a fugitive from justice.

Delegate's Wife Hurt By Stair Fall in Hotel

Mrs. F. Fred Birrell, wife of the Alexandria, Va., representative in the House of Delegates, was injured last night when she fell down several stairs in a Washington hotel. She was taken to her room from the marble stairway, where the accident occurred, and was said to be resting quietly later.

The injury consisted chiefly of a wrenched back, according to Dr. H. T. Smith, Grayson County delegate, who gave her medical aid. Her injuries are not serious, he said.

SUNDAY BLUE LAW BILL FOR U.S. ASKED

Georgia Democrat Would Ban Movies and Shows in All States.

$1,000 FINE IS PROVIDED

A Sunday blue law for the entire Nation was proposed in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Lankford (Democrat), of Georgia.

Mr. Lankford, who for years has tried to have Congress enact a blue law for Washington, provides in his new bill that no motion pictures may be exhibited and no legitimate show staged on Sunday night, either in Washington or any of the States.

Drastic as this may seem to some, it is not nearly as drastic as the bill Mr. Lankford introduced for Washington. This would have prohibited not only theatrical shows on Sunday, but professional baseball and football as well.

The new bill is patterned after the law of 1912, which forbids the exhibition of prize fight pictures handled in interstate commerce. It forbids any theater in the District to exhibit between midnight Saturday and midnight Sunday any motion picture film or theatrical troupe which has been handled or which has traveled from one State to another.

The maximum penalty for violation of these provisions would be $1,000 or imprisonment of not more than one year, or both.

Last summer a delegation that included Bishop James Cannon, jr., of Richmond, called at the White House to try and enlist the President's support for a blue law for Washington, but the executive gave them no encouragement.

British Explorers Laud Byrd Expedition Work

London, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Warm tribute to the work of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition was paid tonight at the first annual meeting of the Antarctic Club, an organization of survivors of eleven British expeditions to the south polar regions from 1899 to 1922. All the members hold the King's Antarctic Medal.

Vice Admiral R. W. Skelton, a member of Scott's discovery expedition in 1901, presided at the meeting. He said that Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd was doing "extraordinary good work in a scientific way" in surveying from the air and sounding through the great ice barrier.

Northern Ireland Bans Newspaper.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—The Ulster government today prohibited the circulation of the Irish World and American Industrial Liberator for one year, beginning February 1. The newspaper is published and edited in New York.

Special Show Is Planned For Knighthood of Youth

Boys and Girls of The Junior Post Writers Club Also to Gather at Rialto This Morning to See Pictures at Newspaper Party.

Boys and girls of Washington, 1,000 of them, members of the Knighthood of Youth and the Junior Post Writers Club, will assemble at the Rialto Theater at 9:30 o'clock this morning, to witness a specially censored motion picture show as the guests of The Washington Post through the courtesy of the Rialto Theater management.

Tickets have been issued to all children eligible to attend. Many of them will be accompanied by their parents and guardians.

Boy Scouts of the city will act as ushers. The program will include in addition to the motion pictures a short talk on "The Knighthood of Youth," by Miss Elisabeth E. Poe, editor of the Junior Post.

The Rialto management has prepared a special motion picture program for the children. The boys and girls will witness the thrilling army life scenes in the current feature at the theater, William Boyd, in "His First Command," with Dorothy Sebastian taking the feminine lead. This is a motion picture with inspiring scenes of cavalry drills taken at Fort Riley, Kans.

The liking of the small boy and the small girl, for that matter, for pictures of Western life is taken care of in another feature film to be shown today: "The Red Coat's Code," a Universal release depicting the work of the Northwest Mounted Police and teaching the lesson that honesty is always the best policy.

The other pictures on the program will include a Hurdy Gurdy comedy and a musical film feature, "The Songs of the Mountains."

Next Saturday morning another special show will be given at the Rialto Theater for the boys and girls of the Junior Post. Tickets to attend this performance on January 25 may be obtained by clipping out the coupon in tomorrow's Washington Post in the Junior Post section.

few points recorded 42 degrees below zero.

Overheated stoves caused fires to break out in some towns. All children in a school at Dayton, 20 miles west of Sheridan, were taken to safety when flames enveloped the building. Mrs. Leslie Meston and her daughter, aged 4, died tonight from burns suffered in a fire in their home at sunrise. Another daughter, 10 years old, was so seriously burned that she was not expected to live through the night. The fire was extinguished by a fight in a temperature of 42 degrees below zero.

The body of an unidentified man who had been frozen to death was found on the Anaconda-Phillipsburg highway, in Montana.

Beaumont, Tex., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Fear was felt today for the safety of a party of seven Orange, Tex., men who have been missing two days on a hunting trip in the Sabine Marshes. The hunters left here Tuesday for the Gulf Coast on the launch Trouble, and it is feared they met with some mishap due to rough water and freezing temperatures. The launch Loafer was enlisted in the search today, and it is planned to make a search by air.

The missing men are Elmer Dunlap, Eugene Nance, Louis Raecker, G. C. Strickland, Zane Courmier, Ed Young and T. A. Stobart.

Capitol Turned to Hotel.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Blizzard conditions changed the State capitol to a hostelry tonight. An invitation to homeless persons to spend tonight at the capitol was issued by the State Board of Affairs. Numerous State employes unable to reach their home planned to remain at the capitol.

Flagstaff, Ariz., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Fifty men on horseback left here today for a cabin sixteen miles north, where seventeen road construction workers are reported snowbound with only a small supply of food.

The rescue expedition carried snowshoes for use when horses no longer are able to penetrate the huge drifts piled up in a week of storms through northern Arizona.

It was believed the rescuers might not be able to reach the cabin before tomorrow.

Floods Imperil 150 Families.

Decker, Ind., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—A 100-foot break in the White River levee 5 miles south of here late today loosed a 9-foot torrent which spread fanshape over an entire township, flooding more than 20,000 acres of farm land and imperiling approximately 150 farm families.

The break, the roar of which could be heard for 5 miles, caused White River to drop half a foot in two hours.

Refugees in the flooded area were sent food and supplies by motorboats from here. Boats were brought by truck from Vincennes and all available craft here were put to use.

Many farmers in the newly flooded area preferred to remain on the second floor of their homes. Food was carried to them, and in other places the marooned were placed aboard the boats and brought to Decker. A beating snowstorm added to the discomfort of the rescue workers and flood victims.

Another Break Feared.

Meanwhile church women and school girls cooked and served food for the refugees and for fifteen workers who were trying desperately to save another section of the levee 1½ miles from here.

Should this north section break, it would mean the flooding of another vast stretch of land and would endanger more lives. It also would cover United States Highway 41 with water to a depth of 12 to 15 feet.

As soon as the south levee broke telephone operators at Hazleton and Decker sounded the alarm throughout the low country and the townspeople began preparations for relief work on a large scale.

Teh flood situation was improved at Vincennes today, with the Wabash River practically stationary at a stage of 25.3 feet.

Boats Leave for Decker.

Vincennes, Ind., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Rescue parties with boats started from here this afternoon for Decker Chapel, a village 15 miles to the Southwest, which was reported to have been inundated by the breaking of a levee on White River.

There are 25 families in the village and 15 of them had taken refuge on the second floor of a school building. The others were marooned in the upper floors of dwellings. Breaking of the levee released a six-foot wall of water which swept over all of Decker township in which the village of Decker Chapel is located. No loss of life has been reported.

2,000 COMB FOREST IN HUNT FOR KILLERS

Five Suspects Captured as State Policeman Dies After Shooting.

AIRPLANE AIDS SEARCH

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—After 2,000 citizens, many of them armed, 300 State and town policemen, and observers in an airplane had beaten and combed the countryside north of the city all day in an effort to capture two men who killed a policeman, five suspects were arrested tonight.

Two of these were taken in Waterbury and three in New Britain, and in the arrest of John Brophy here, the police believe they have the man who shot and killed Patrolman James McNamee, of the Bristol police, early yesterday and for whom the whole State has been searching.

But Brophy was not taken without a struggle. He was seen walking along a street in this city by a policeman, who, with a local patrolman, approached him in a car. As the two jumped from their car Brophy immediately opened fire, striking the State trooper in the wrist. Then he surrendered.

The other man arrested in Waterbury is Henry Schraeger, of New Britain, and in New Britain the police captured Allen Norton, William Slade and Herman Schraeger, a brother of Henry. The latter, who is a hunch-back, was taken as he was about to board a bus.

All the men are held under suspicion for the Bristol police but a charge of attempt to kill will be made against Brophy here for the attempt on the life of the trooper.

There were four bandits in the gang when they began a ride of terror through the towns near here late last night. They stole an automobile owned by Dr. W. H. Morrison at New Britain and their first move was to hold up the owner of a gas station at Cheshire.

A description of the stolen car and the men was immediately broadcast over the State police ticker. Patrolman James McNamee, of the Bristol Police Department, got the alarm and stopped four men in a car at a Bristol gas station. He was not sure they were the fugitives and his approach was friendly.

"Boys, we have an alarm for a car like yours," he said. "You'll have to come along to the station."

A fusillade of shots was his answer. Several bullets struck him, but all missed his heart. He lived for half an hour. News of the killing went out on the next ticker alarm and officers in all the surrounding towns began a search.

At 4 o'clock this morning the automobile was found abandoned in Waterbury. Squads of policemen were sent to outlying sections. In a densely wooded section to the north near Pearsalsville a squad under Capt. Colosanto sighted the two men. The fugitives at once opened fire and the police answered, but they were both firing at long range.

Another Squad Arrives.

The sound of the shots brought another squad under Lieut. Stevens. When it was sighted by the bandits they ran into the thickets and divided. The police lost sight of them after this interchange of shots, but the order was given to summon all assistance and surround the entire stretch of wooded country.

Calls for help were sent to the State police, to Hartford, Perryville, New Britain and other towns. Three hundred uniformed men in automobiles arrived in an hour. Citizens who learned of the killing of the policeman and saw the uniformed men in cars rushing up and down the roads while others beat the woods joined the search.

Airplane Sent From Field.

The State police airplane, in command of Trooper Myron Hill, was sent up from Bethany Field. Under State troopers the citizens were organized into squads and every stretch of State roads surrounding the country in which the men were hiding was placed under guard. Most of the uniformed police officers were assigned to the details beating the woods from both north and south.

Just before dusk a telephone lineman reported that he saw a man running from the woods at the far north end and a squad was sent to the place without discovering a sign of the fugitive. Policemen in the woods came on an old barn which showed signs of recent occupancy and they believe the men made it their headquarters in dashes out into the country to raid gasoline stations, several of which have been held up recently.

ALCOHOL DIVERSION LESS, DORAN AVERS

Corn Sugar Distilling Now Chief Dependence in Rum Trade, He Declares.

ADDRESSES DRY LEAGUE

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Diversion of industrial alcohol furnishes but a small portion of the intoxicating beverages sold by American bootleggers, Dr. James M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, said in an address before the Antisaloon League national convention today.

While asserting that the present diversion is one-fifth that of three years ago and is continuing to be reduced, Dr. Doran warned the dry crusaders that too much stress should not be placed on this phase of enforcement.

"Crippling of our scientific and educational institutions, our medical arts and our commercial organizations dependent on the efficient and rapid movement and procurement of essential alcohol supplies is too big a price to pay for extreme national prohibition," he said.

Corn Sugar Now in Vogue.

The commissioner estimated that not more than 2,750,000 gallons of industrial alcohol went into the bootleg market last year, while at least seven or eight times that amount of high-proof alcohol was manufactured illicitly from corn sugar.

"The corn sugar liquor racket now surpasses all others in the field of operation of the bootlegger," he said.

Regarding regulation of industrial alcohol the commissioner added that if, "under the lash of extremists and politicians harsh and restrictive measures are adopted toward scientific and industrial groups, we will witness a terrific blow to scientific and commercial progress in the United States. An honest business or professional man will succumb long before the crook is reached." Regulations, he declared, can not be made 100 per cent effective or self-executing.

Sees No Chance of Repeal.

Asserting that the eighteenth amendment "never will be repealed," Dr. Doran declared that the Coast Guard and other enforcement agencies will "continue to use arms when it is necessary for self-defense or to carry out their duties under the law."

To dry workers Dr. Doran counseled less "tinkering with the top of prohibition and more work with the foundation—the people." It is preposterous, he said, to set up a standard of 100 per cent for prohibition enforcement when no one will apply that standard to any other law. For the present work of his department, he said, he had "no bucks to pass, no apologies to offer and no alibis to bring forward."

The men of the bureau, he said, are exerting themselves to the limit.

Dr. Doran said that he is "out of patience with flippant statements" about President Hoover's appointment of commissions to make investigations.

A review of the activities of the Federal prohibition enforcement agencies since their establishment was given in an address by James J. Britt, attorney for the Prohibition Bureau. The average annual appropriation over a period of ten years, he said, has been $8,800,000, and the average number of agents 1,800. A total of 206 persons have been killed in Federal enforcement activities, 58 of them being officers, Britt declared.

SENATE WILL VOTE ON DRY LAW REPEAL

dry there are many what might be termed border-line cases. There are probably as many as 25 Republicans in good standing who would prefer that the matter not be brought up at this time. Perhaps more of these would vote dry than wet, if forced to vote, but they look to the leaders to protect them in embarrassing matters of this kind, and the leaders probably will.

Precedent of Tilson.

As evidence that the leaders probably will, indeed, is the position of the majority leader, Mr. Tilson, himself. He would think a long time and very profoundly before he would vote against a repeal resolution, coming from a wet Connecticut district, as he does, yet would not that be a fine picture for the Republican leader to be voting wet with his party so very dry? The same would apply to Speaker Longworth, except that he would not have to vote.

So the wets probably will not have the fun of getting a vote in the House. They would make a better showing there and be more able to capitalize it there than in the Senate.

But a right good idea did come yesterday from Representative Maas, of Minnesota. He made known that he is going to try to get the unofficial wet committee to hold hearings on the various pending wet measures just as if it were a regularly constituted House committee. Undoubtedly the wets could get over a lot of propaganda this way. They could get out some high class wet talk, their main trouble now being that their agitation is carried on by just a few and by the same few day after day.

Representative Sirovich, of New York, got a good hearing yesterday, though, from wets and drys alike, because he had something to say. He is a member of the American College of Surgeons. He demanded that the Treasury substitute emetics for poison in alcohol as several foreign governments do, he said.

Emetics make it impossible to retain the alcohol but are not poisonous, he declared, explaining that all of the poison which the Government now places in alcohol cannot be removed by the illicit users, despite their claims.

Recalling recent pleas by dry leaders that $200,000,000 be raised for enforcement, Dr. Sirovich declared he would rather appropriate that sum to "pension every father and mother who has grown old in labor in this country when the curtain of life is about to fall."

Woman Asks $58,000 As Accident Damages

Etta H. Brown, of 1420 Thirty-fourth street northwest, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court against Jean R. Patterson of 2501 Massachusetts avenue northwest, seeking to recover $58,000 damages as the result of an automobile accident.

The plaintiff alleges that the accident occurred February 17 last on Wisconsin avenue northwest, and that her personal injuries amounted to $50,000. She also claims that at the time of the accident she had expended large sums of money improving certain property in the District with the idea of selling it and that as a result of her injuries she suffered additional damages in the sum of $8,000. Attorneys M. M. Doyle and F. A. Thues appear for the plaintiff.

MERCHANTS DESIRE NEW ARMORY HERE

Association Favors Bill to Buy Auditorium for Use of Guardsmen.

KELLY, SHELBY PRAISED

Indorsement of proposals for use of the Washington Auditorium as the District National Guard Armory, construction of a new Center Market, the cherry blossom fete among other matters was given consideration by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association at a meeting of its board of governors yesterday at its headquarters in the Star Building.

The board formally went on record favoring the bill introduced by Representative Frank L. Bowman, of West Virginia, for an appropriation of not more than $1,000,000 to purchase the Auditorium for an armory, and the bill of Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee, for a $1,300,000 appropriation for a new center market to replace the structure soon to be demolished.

The cherry blossom fete, sponsored by the Washington Chamber of Commerce, was indorsed. Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, president of the association, as chairman of a committee, is to cooperate in the plans for the event.

Resolutions were adopted expressing gratification at the recent exoneration of Inspector William S. Shelby and Lieut. Edward J. Kelly by a Police Trial Board on charges of bungling and inefficiency in the McPherson death probe. Confidence in both men and in the Police Department generally was given.

Support of the association was pledged to the Community Chest campaign, with gratification expressed at the success of last year's drive.

Gen. Stephan was authorized to name a committee to study ways and means of promoting expansion of industrial activities of Greater Washington after several speakers had pointed out that man spacious sites exist in and around the city where industry could locate without blighting the beauty of the National Capital. Buzzards Point in the Southeast section was cited particularly.

Both Gen. Stephan and Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the association, upon tendering their annual reports were commended by the board. The latter reviewed the detailed activities of the organization, pointing out that establishment of the furnace vacuum cleaning service among members on a cooperative basis, and the form of organization of the association with specialized trade groups, had attracted widespread interest. Mr. Shaw will talk on this plan of organization at the convention next month of the National Association of Retail Secretaries.

Gen. Stephan urged the need of the Auditorium as an armory for the District National Guard, which he declared could be utilized for purposes other than military on occasions, and also called attention to the broadening scope of the work of trade organizations throughout the Nation.

Man Held Inferior To Woman Fireman

Portable School Children Claim Male Species Not So Good.

Maybe a man is a better fireman for District schools than a woman, but mothers of the small children attending the B. W. Murch portables don't believe it.

For three years a colored woman has kept the fires going in the portable stoves during school hours and no word of complaint has been heard. Yesterday a man was on the job as a substitute, and two classes—the second and sixth—were so cold that they went outdoors to get warm, according to Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, leader of the fight to have the colored woman transferred to the new Murch School when it opens February 1.

The Board of Education last Wednesday refused the plea of the Murch School mothers to have a woman appointed as caretaker at the new school in place of the usual janitor-fireman, on the grounds that a woman can not fire furnaces.

CAPITAL EXPANSION PROJECT OUTLINED

Hoover Message Is Read to Distinguished Assembly; State Heads Talk.

ALL PROMISE TO HELP

Pollard both reviewed the activities already launched in their respective States for the development of the regional plans and suburban Washington.

Declaring that the future development of Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, in Maryland, are inseparably linked that of the District, Gov. Ritchie stated the border line is no division or barrier, although the governmental policies of the territories must differ.

Areas Have Common Cause.

"These counties of Maryland and the District have a common cause," he continued, "and they must cooperate because of their interdependence. And Virginia is also a mutual third party."

After telling of the work of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, two Maryland organizations created for the primary purpose of aiding in the development of Greater Washington, Gov. Ritchie told of the improvement work on the Baltimore boulevard, the extension of Rhode Island avenue, and other contemplated highway work, including a road from Laurel to the District line, and declared this work to be of first importance to Washington.

In assuring Maryland's cooperation to the development program for Washington, he declared his State was ready and anxious to share its fair part in the work and stated the State also will do its part in the development of a great airport for Washington in Maryland.

Work of Virginia Sketched.

Gov. Pollard likewise sketched the work of Virginia organizations toward the development of the program, and stated he had asked the General Assembly to pass all laws necessary for the carrying out of the program.

"We want to do everything," he said, "in making this beautiful dream for Washington come true."

In expressing appreciation for these pledges of cooperation, Frederic A. Delano, president of the Park and Planning Commission, pointed out that such aid was absolutely necessary "for the future Washington, with a population of 2,000,000, must extend into both adjacent States."

Arthur A. Shurtleff, president of the National Society of Landscape Architects, declared the cities of the United States are enthusiastic about the development plans for Washington.

Capital Model For Others.

"Washington is truly a model for other cities of the Nation," he said. "Public buildings everywhere are being compared with those in Washington."

In explaining the development plans, Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d used an array of stereopticon slides. Virginia projects were shown in accordance with studies of the Virginia-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Arlington County Zoning Commission, while the Maryland projects were exhibited as planned by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

The regional plan covers the area as far north and east as Baltimore and as far south and west as Quantico, Va.

Existing Parks Shown.

Existing public parks and proposed public parks, public and private institutions, cemeteries, proposed airports, golf and country clubs, existing principal highways and proposed highways, and cities and towns were shown on the plan, as well as the State, county and District lines.

Besides Gov. Pollard, the Virginia delegation included Lieut. Gov. James H. Price and 38 members of the General Assembly who came to Washington yesterday morning and spent the day visiting historical places in the District and surrounding territory.

Greeted in Alexandria.

Headed by Lieut. Gov. Price and J. S. Brown, speaker of the House of Delegates, the Virginia solons arrived at Alexandria shortly before noon. They were greeted by Henry Curtis Morris, chairman of the arrangements committee for the Alexandria and Arlington County and Fairfax County Chambers of Commerce and other citizens' organizations in that section.

After dining at the George Mason Hotel, the delegation went on an extensive sight-seeing tour along the Potomac River and Virginia and Maryland approaches to the District. They also visited the Arlington National Cemetery where Lieut. Gov. Price placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and an inspection was made of the Lee Mansion. Subsequently they crossed the old chain-bridge and viewed the Lincoln Memorial Bridge, which is nearing completion, and passed through Fort Myer. As they crossed the military reserve, the post fired a salute in honor of the lieutenant governor.

Architects Name Officers.

At their annual election yesterday morning, members of the Society of Landscape Architects elected Albert A. Shurtleff, of Boston, president, and named A. R. Nichols, of Minneapolis, vice president; S. H. Hare, of Kansas City, treasurer; and B. W. Pond, of New York, secretary. Trustees who were also elected included, A. D. Taylor, Cleveland; Clarence Fowler, New York; H. V. Hubbard, Boston; P. H. Elwood, Ames, Iowa, and Stephen Child, San Francisco.

During the afternoon, the program was devoted to discussions of projects for the beautification of Washington. Dr. Frederick V. Coville, botanist of the Agriculture Department, outlined the work and purpose of the National Arboretum, of which he is acting director; Maj. Brehon Sommervell, United States District Engineer, discussed the plan for reclamation of the Anacostia and Potomac marshes for park purposes, and Raymond E. Toms, chief engineer of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, detailed various features in connection with the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway.

50 AIRPLANES HUNT MISSING MAIL PILOT

Scores of Horsemen Also Aid in Desert Search for Maurice Graham.

TWO CLEWS FOLLOWED

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—A widespread search was launched today for Maurice Graham, missing air mail pilot. The Western Air Express had recruited nearly 50 airplanes, including Army, Navy and Marine Corps craft, and mobilized scores of horsemen to hunt for the veteran W. A. E. pilot, who disappeared a week ago in the mountainous desert wastes between here and Salt Lake City.

Grizzled prospectors and cowboys previously had joined in the hunt, providing knowledge of the trackless desert areas.

Two principal clews to the fate of Graham had been unearthed and to these the main attention of the searchers was directed. At the Groom Mines, 100 miles to the northwest, a miner reported hearing an airplane at 5 a. m. last Saturday. From Meadow, Utah, came a report of the sighting for the past four nights of strange lights in the adjacent mountains. Efforts were being made to establish the authenticity of the rumors.

Flying weather was the best today since the search began and the aviators, fellow pilots, believed they would find Graham waiting for aid in an isolated valley.

Girl on Fur Ship Doubts Eielson Has Been Found

Radio Message Says Presence in Area as Reported by Moscow Would Have Been Known Before; Rescue Preparations Go Forward, However.

Nome, Alaska, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Doubt that Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, missing Alaska aviators, will be found in the district in which Moscow dispatches reported them located, was expressed today in a radio message from Marion Swenson, 17-year-old Seattle high school girl, who is aboard the ice-bound fur-trading vessel Nanuk at North Cape, Siberia.

"The district near the Angumea River has been thoroughly covered by dog teams and airplanes," the girl's message said. "We can not understand how the two men could have been in that locality without their presence being known by some one, even though there are few inhabitants.

"Natives inland and along the coast know that Eielson and Borland have been missing somewhere between Teller and the Nanuk since November 9. They also know that the Soviet government has offered a reward of 1,000 rubles for their rescue.

"We consider the report of the native woman, who said she heard a plane twice in the same day in the locality of a deer camp a few miles from Cape Serdze, as the most important recent clew."

However, Joe Crosson and Harold Gilliam, rescue fliers aboard the Nanuk, today made preparations to scout the Angumea River region again.

SUGAR PROTECTION.

The Senate yesterday made short work of the proposal to pay a bounty to domestic sugar producers by an adverse vote of 53 to 22. The vote for the bounty was made up of Western Republicans, most of them insurgents, and five Democrats. Republicans and Democrats joined in the big majority against the proposal.

This vote, like that upon Senator Harrison's amendment rejecting the proposal for an increased duty, is not to be construed as representing determined opposition to suitable and effective protection to the home sugar industry. The Senate is against a bounty, but many of the senators who reject the bounty plan are in favor of protecting domestic sugar producers. What they demand is that protection shall be effective, reaching the farmers who produce beets as well as the manufacturers of beet sugar. While the bounty plan may have accomplished this aim to some extent, it is objectionable because it invites bounty demands from all sorts of alleged struggling industries. A precedent, once established, would be used as a means of forcing open the Treasury to special interests in all parts of the country.

There remains the proposal to limit the importation of Philippine sugar. This action ought to be taken, without regard to the rate of duty upon foreign sugar, because the duty does not apply to the Philippines. American producers of sugar are face to face with a growing competition from the Philippines which threatens to destroy the home industry. The duty on foreign sugar, mainly from Cuba, is at least partial protection to home industry, but there is no protection whatever against Philippine competition.

American capital is invested in both Cuba and the Philippines; but the capital invested in Cuba must clear the hurdle of a duty, while the capital invested in the Philippines enjoys a free market in this country. If American capital alone were to be considered, Congress should give preference to American capital invested in the United States, rather than American capital invested abroad. The tariff bill contains provisions which are aimed to prevent American capital from going abroad and exploiting cheap foreign labor and then sending in cheap labor products free of duty to compete with American-made goods.

If it is not practicable or desirable to apply a duty upon Philippine sugar equal to the duty upon Cuban sugar, it is practicable to limit the importation of free sugar from the Philippines. No American capital invested there would be unjustly treated by such an arrangement. It would still enjoy an advantage over the American capital invested in Cuba. European capital is also heavily invested in the Philippine sugar industry. Why should this capital have free entry into the American market when other foreign capital must pay a duty?

If the domestic sugar growers and producers are entitled to protection they are entitled to protection against all outside competition. Protection against Cuba and other foreign countries, with the Philippines free to send in all the sugar they can produce, is no protection at all. The duty against outside sugars is a bounty to Philippine sugar so long as it is admitted here duty free. The 300 per cent increase in sugar imports from the Philippines tells the tale and clearly indicates what is to come unless a limitation is imposed. American raisers of sugar beets and the manufacturers of beet sugar will be wiped off the map by free cheap labor sugar from the islands, financed by Europeans and by Americans who send their capital to exploit cheap island labor rather than invest it at home.

THE MAIL CONTRACT MUDDLE.

Inasmuch as the Postoffice Department is preparing to ask for bids for the carrying of ocean mails, it is highly important that Congress make haste in clarifying the disputed points in the merchant marine act. The controversy that arose last fall, when contracts were refused certain purchasers of Government-owned vessels, has not been resolved. As matters now stand, the Postoffice Department insists that it is bound by the law to award contracts to the lowest bidders, whether they are operating former Shipping Board lines or not.

It is contended, variously, that the Postmaster General has no alternative but to award contracts to the low bidder, provided he can perform the required service, and that a provisional clause gives authority for casting aside low bids offered by those other than the purchasers of Government lines. The independent operators incline to the former viewpoint, and they have found a supporter in the interdepartmental committee on the award of ocean mail contracts. Purchasers of Shipping Board lines, however, contend that the merchant marine act was drafted primarily to foster the establishment of a privately-owned merchant fleet, and they assert that it would be the height of inconsistency were the Government through one branch to sell ship lines and extend tangible aid for their upbuilding and, through another branch, to set up ruinous competition. The situation is further involved by the fact that the Government still owns many lines which, according to the law, it must dispose of, but which, unless some guarantee against mail carrying competition can be given, are not attractive investments.

Representative White, coauthor of the merchant marine act, has introduced a bill to amend section 407 so that when a bid for carrying mail is submitted by the operator of a line purchased from the Government, the Postmaster General must award the contract to that bidder, whether or not lower bids have been submitted, provided only that the operator possess qualifications to insure the successful performance of the contract and that his bid is not in excess of the maximum compensation authorized by the law. Inasmuch as it was clearly the intent of Congress in enacting the merchant marine act to regard the mail-carrying contracts as subventions to make possible the profitable operation of American bottoms; inasmuch as it would be inconsistent for the Government to foster competition to infant lines and inasmuch as the entire project of reestablishing the merchant marine is stagnating while the controversy remains unresolved, early action on the White proposal is called for.

SENATOR BROOKHART'S MODESTY.

The country is indebted to Senator Brookhart for many things, not the least of which are his delightfully original economic theories. He rose in the Senate this week to denounce the heresy being broadcast by the Federal Farm Board; namely, that American farmers must cut down their production if they hope to increase the return on their products. Being a dirt farmer himself, he considers it "physically impossible to control agricultural production," and advises his constituents not to try.

The best policy for the American people, the Iowan says, is to stimulate agricultural production. The objective he holds before the farmer is a bigger and better surplus. Even then production will not increase as fast as population, he thinks. So in the end prices will be good, the farmer will be sleek and fat, and every one will be happy.

It seems that the Farm Board has been much concerned over this subject of surpluses. But it does not perturb the mind of those who think in the terms of debenture bounties and Government aid. Members of the Farm Board must be a lot of old fogies to suggest that the farmers refrain from producing as much as they can. Why has not some one upset their sophistry before?

If one criticism can be made of Senator Brookhart, it is that he does not go far enough. He is too timid, too reactionary. Why does he not demand an appropriation for purchase of surplus wheat, corn and cotton? These commodities could be transported at Government expense to feed the hungry Chinese and clothe all the poverty-stricken people of Europe. These bottomless pits can absorb all that America can produce, and still call for more. The United States could make a reputation for generosity that would stagger humanity? Why so backward, Senator Brookhart?

TO HELP SMALLER COLLEGES.

Dr. Albert Norman Ward's resolution calling upon the Association of American Colleges to sponsor a campaign for a $1,000,000,000 endowment for the small liberal arts colleges of the country, calls attention to an urgent educational need. Most of the larger universities have received endowments and some of them have millions at their disposal. Dr. Ward has found that 120,000 students in one group of colleges are given about the same financial support as $75,000 in another group. The result is unequal educational opportunities.

The necessity of preserving the small college is obvious. Educational opportunities of the large institutions are usually superior, but the social advantages of the small colleges are so pronounced that Harvard and Yale are trying to break up their student bodies into groups that will provide the social environment now afforded only in smaller institutions. If the small colleges were given resources even approximating those of the large institutions, it is reasonable to suppose that the concentration of students would be less pronounced.

There has been a general impression that college enrollment is reaching stabilization, but Dr. William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, says the impression is misleading. The annual report of the commissioner showed that the estimated increase of 2 per cent for last year was the smallest since the World War. But the statement applied only to the institutions on the approved list of the Association of American Universities. This list included only approximately one-fifth of all the institutions enrolling students above high school age. The enrollment in the regular sessions of all colleges and universities shows an increase from 463,000 students in 1920 to 868,000 in 1928. The increase during the last two years amounted to 101,000. During the same period enrollment in summer sessions increased threefold and extension work of university grade fivefold.

This growth in college attendance can not be accounted for by the general growth in population. Dr. Cooper found that in 1926 16.2 per cent of the population between the ages of 19 and 22 years were enrolled. In two years this had increased to 17.95 per cent. There appears to be no justification for basing needs for college training in the coming few years on the belief that the rush to college is at an end.

Since much of this extra burden seems to be thrown upon the smaller colleges, Dr. Ward's resolution is a step in the right direction. The large institutions draw endowments and bequests unto themselves. If the smaller colleges are to participate in benefits of this kind, some organized method of obtaining them will no doubt be necessary.

CANADA'S LIQUOR SYSTEM

From the London Times.

The recent decision of the people of Nova Scotia in favor of the sale of liquor in the province brings prohibition in Canada almost to an end. Of the nine provinces only the small and remote community of Prince Edward Island remains dry, as it has been for many years. Of the other eight, seven have made experiments with prohibition during the last ten years, and all have now returned to some system providing for the sale of liquor. Quebec alone never went wholly dry, and has a system of its own.

Nova Scotia has been one of the last strongholds of prohibition. But having a long and rugged coastline with innumerable inlets in the Atlantic seaboard, it has been a happy hunting ground for liquor smugglers. That easy and profitable trade had in recent times grown so enormously that it had become a public nuisance and a menace to law and order. The people of the province took their decision in a referendum held expressly to decide the matter. The proposal to change the law was carried by a large majority. Many people of moderate views were influenced by the desire to curb the trade of the smuggler, and they felt that the only way to do so was for the government to take the liquor trade wholly under its control. It is now said that when prohibition was adopted in Canada the people voted for a theory, but that now they have come into line with realities.

It has yet to be seen what form of state control Nova Scotia will adopt. There are three forms of state control now prevailing in Canada. Quebec has the freest system. There liquor may be got in three different ways. There are many taverns where beer may be purchased for consumption on the premises; wines and beers may be purchased for consumption with meals in hotels and restaurants; spirits may be got only at government stores, one bottle at a time, and for consumption only in private places. This plan has worked well in Quebec for some years, and on the whole it is probably the best.

Other provinces, such as Manitoba and British Columbia, have followed Quebec in adopting the sale of beer by the glass in restaurants and other places and allowing other liquors to be bought only under license at government depots. In Ontario there is no public drinking of liquor at all.

In Canada the sale of liquor is wholly under the control of the provincial governments, and the federal government could only interfere with the importation of liquor into the country from abroad or with the trade between the provinces. In every case a bare majority of the electorate would suffice to sanction a change in policy. Practically the whole of the country, after giving a fair and prolonged trial to prohibition, has returned to the sale of liquor, but only under control of the government. It is generally felt that the saloon has gone forever, and public drinking, where it is allowed, is only of light beers and wines.

Under the system of local option large areas of Canada have been dry for many years, and the adoption of general prohibition came about largely through the example of the United States. There is no doubt that if prohibition could be repealed in the United States as easily as in Canada there are many States which would now be wet.

Canada has the advantage of being able to modify its policy to suit the wishes of the people, and it seems likely that it will continue to make experiments until a system has been worked out which will satisfy the large moderate-minded majority of the people.

Canada has attracted a great deal of tourist traffic from the United States in recent years. It would probably be too much to say that the public sale of liquor there is the chief inducement. It is one of many, and the sales among travelers from across the border are very large. The question of the transport of liquor from Canada into the United States is even now proving troublesome to statesmen and officials on both sides of the border, and is bound to become more so. Not all Canadians are willing to say that it is no concern of theirs, and the troubles which are constantly arising out of this illegal trade may one day move the people to take some definite action to eradicate it.

YOUNG COUNSEL.

Old Fifty-nine should hold its tongue
Within the presence of the young,
Unless in terms of blooming cheek
And happy hearts it still can speak.

Unless Old Fifty-nine can think
In terms of youthful cheeks and pink
And dancing feet that need no rest,
Its thoughts were better unexpressed.

For what youth needs is simple truth,
To serve it in its time of youth,
And not the wisdom of the sage
Designed to comfort wearied age.

A tired old man is no fit guide
For youth which walks with healthy stride,
And tired old thoughts, worn thin by pain,
To serve the need of youth are vain.

Old Fifty-nine should try to be
As gay of heart as Twenty-three,
And think in terms of young desires
To speak the wisdom youth requires.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to a Flapper Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN

My dear Louise: Yesterday, when one of your acquaintances was the topic of conversation, you attributed her unpopularity to the fact that she uses good English.

I didn't question your diagnosis, for I have known older people to suffer from the same cause.

When we are wrong, and know we are wrong, it is hard to forgive those who are right. They are a constant reproach to us.

It is a hard commentary on our civilization, and yet it is true, that those who speak correctly are accused of putting on airs. They seem to be posing. And the impression they make seems to prove us a society of boors, as though we had condemned one of our number for taking a bath or being honest.

But the common sense of the people seldom leads them astray. Remember that. They may seem to condemn a man without cause, but the event proves their wisdom. And when they dislike some person who speaks too correctly it is because they know his perfection of speech is not an evidence of culture but a confession of insincerity, pretense, hypocrisy and "swellhead."

It isn't his good English they resent, after all, but his bad manners.

It is an evidence of bad manners to make yourself conspicuous in any society by assuming an air of superiority—by dressing better than the others can; by using words or phrases the others don't understand; by being different and thus seeming to condemn their ways and customs.

For that reason I would have you avoid "book talk" in your common speech. Shakespeare himself fathered much of our slang, and no one need be ashamed to use the inelegant, homely bits of vernacular that express an idea more clearly than orthodox English can.

Use a little slang as spicing. Every solemn sentence is the better for it.

But, honey, if you love me and wish to prolong my days, hasten to outgrow your present habit of using nine parts of spice and one part meat.

Like others of your years and times, you are forgetting how to talk except in stereotyped, wise-crack phrases.

A girl never is amused any more. She like to o' died; she nearly passed out; it slayed her. Everything is perfectly darling or perfectly awful. Take away her parrot phrases and she can't express herself any better than she could at the age of 6.

Imagine a high school graduate or a college girl who can't even speak her own language! And yet they are trying to learn French and Latin!

It's shameful, dear. It's common and vulgar—this slang stuff is. You never will acquire a civilized vocabulary until you quit it.

A little clever slang is all right, but not this silly stuff. It's—well, it's a pain in the neck. Love, DAD.

THE BABE AND THE COLONEL.

Col. Ruppert—What's troubling you, Babe?

The Babe—I've gotta have more money, colonel.

Col. Ruppert—Don't you realize you are already getting more than the President of the United States?

Babe—Why not? What could he do for you with two out and the winning run on third?

Col. Ruppert—How much more money do you want, Babe?

Babe—How much have you got? Beg pardon, colonel, I mean how much are you willing to pay?

Col. Ruppert—You're already getting $75,000 a year, with many extras.

Babe—I know, but I want $85,000 a year and a three-year contract.

Col. Ruppert (gasping)—That's a lot of money, George.

Babe—Not when you need a long hit to cop the pennant.

* * * *

Col. Ruppert—I think I have been very liberal with you. I am paying you the highest salary in the history of baseball.

Babe—And I am giving you the longest hits in the history of baseball.

Col. Ruppert—Money isn't everything, Babe.

Babe—Don't try to get me to strike at those slow ones, colonel.

* * * *

Col. Ruppert—It seems to me that you don't appreciate that I have always done very well by you, Babe.

Babe—Well, I've never sold you short either, colonel. I've just gotta have more money.

Col. Ruppert—The Yankees can't afford to pay you more money.

Babe—Hark!

Colonel—What?

Babe—I think I hear the turnstiles laughing at that one.

Colonel—We don't seem to be getting anywhere.

Babe—No, we're both fanning at fast ones. Now all you've gotta say is yes or no.

Colonel—We might get together on the $5,000 raise, but * * *

Babe—Ten thousand, colonel. And stop pitching low to me.

Colonel—We might get together on the $10,000 raise, but I couldn't give you a contract for three years.

Babe—Why not?

Colonel—Your best days are over, George. How do I know you'll be any use to the club three years from now?

Babe—They'll still be playing the game with bats, won't they?

Colonel—Presumably.

Babe—And they're not going to abolish fences around ball parks?

Colonel—Not that I know of.

Babe—Well, then, why the hesitancy?

Colonel (realizing he is being struck out)—Oh, well, I'll think it over. In the meantime, we'll give out the usual newspaper stuff saying that we can't reach an agreement and that you're the first holdout of the year.

Babe—Okay, colonel. It'll all help the publicity. So long and don't forget—$85,000 for three years.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Why Not Separate Study of Cause of War and Its Cure?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Delegates to the Washington Conference on the Cause and Cure of War have, concerned themselves with the many defects in the existing machinery for maintaining peace. It is apparent that some of the delegates are hoping to find a fool-proof device which would automatically extinguish the flame of war wherever it should chance to break out. The existing mediums through which the nations attempt to deal with the question are full of gaps and loopholes. It is not apparent whether this conference of women would discard or patch them, but their deficiency is clearly seen.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who always has a word to say when international peace is being discussed by a group of women, drew attention to the fact that a nation may withdraw from the League of Nations, the world court or any treaty. This is considered prima facie evidence that these agencies are deficient. Why, she says, any and all this peace machinery might break down in a time of world stress. And, of course, when the machinery of peace gets out of repair the nations rush in and carry away the spoils.

What the world needs, according to Mrs. Catt, is some kind of world pledge from which nations can not withdraw. As near as can be made out, she would force them to voluntarily submit all varieties of disputes to peaceful adjustment. It is not quite clear who would wield the big stick that would bring all nations "voluntarily" in line.

As long as steam is allowed to blow off into the air it can do no harm. But once it is confined to a given space with no chance of escape an explosion is the inevitable result. Since the dawn of civilization men have been revolting and fighting against tyranny. Now when the cause seems to have been won for a considerable portion of mankind, a few enthusiasts want to reestablish a supertyranny as a cure for fighting. All the complaints and quarrels of all races and nations would be mixed together in a closed caldron from which there would be no escape except by explosion.

In view of the repeated lessons of history and peculiarities of human nature, is it not possible that the women's international conference has become confused on the cause and cure of war? Would it not be a pretty good plan in the future to devote separate gatherings to cause and cure? MERE MAN.

Panama Canal Itself a Monument to Gen. Goethals and All His Collaborators—No Statue Needed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is doubtful whether the people of the United States will support the proposal of Representative Wainwright to erect a statue, of heroic size, of Gen. George W. Goethals on an appropriate site within the Canal Zone, in commemoration of his "signally distinguished services in connection with the construction and operation of the Panama Canal."

That Gen. Goethals at Panama achieved greatness for himself and country is indisputable. The job which he turned out speedily and well had theretofore baffled the most eminent engineers of Europe, especially those of France. Where collectively they had spent upwards of four hundred years, Goethals actually required but seven—with their aid and the efforts of thousands of Americans and native laborers from countries adjacent to the Canal Zone.

But why a monument at all, to any one? The Panama Canal is monument enough to perpetuate the great work of every one who had anything to do with its construction. One recalls that well-known Latin inscription on the tomb of Sir Christopher Wren, in St. Paul's: "Si monumentum requiris, circumspice"—"If you would see his monument, look around you." E. P. G.

Better Get Your 1930 Tags and Avoid the Rush.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Less than two weeks remain for motorists to procure their 1930 District tags, and from the looks of it, at the present time, there is going to be a mad rush on the District Building the last two days of this month. Get your tags now and avoid the rush!

A week or so ago it was announced over the radio that there were just a very few people in line waiting to get their licenses, so a friend of mine tells me, and he dashed right down to get his, but too many others had heard the announcement; for when he arrived there was a long line of patient waiters. The only way to avoid having a long wait the last two days is for every one to get his tags as soon as possible. There is always a grand rush on the final day in all such instances, and from the figures to date of those who have obtained tags, this year is not going to be an exception. The clerks in the District Building handle the distribution of tags very efficiently, thus expediting the service a great deal. TAGS.

Country as a Whole Can Be Dry, Even if Some Big Cities Dodge the Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "wets" often draw a comparison between the fifteenth and eighteenth amendments. They say the fifteenth is not enforced, and, therefore, the eighteenth can not be. But the fifteenth amendment is in force throughout three-fourths of the United States. It is only in about one-fourth of the States that it is evaded or defied.

Some particularly wet spots, especially the big cities, may continue to dodge and defy the liquor law for many years to come; but that need not keep the country as a whole from having the benefit of it.

PARIS, BERLIN AGREE ON DEBT BOND ISSUE

Last Young Plan Obstacle Removed as Conditions Are Determined.

EASTERN ACCORD NETX

The Hague, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—The last obstacle to adoption of the Young plan for reparations by the chief creditors of Germany was overcome tonight when the French and Germans agreed on the conditions under which the first slice of reparations bonds shall be put on the market.

In order to furnish Germany the money required for railroads and other internal needs, it was decided to increase the first issue from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000, with the amount of increase assigned to Germany. The bonds will be issued to bear from 5 to 6 per cent interest.

The Germans agreed to abstain from seeking other loans in foreign markets until next October, at which time it was supposed the first issue of the reparation bonds will have been floated. If they have not been, then the Germans have agreed not to seek money abroad before a year from next April.

20 Per Cent For U. S. Market.

It was understood that 20 per cent, or $60,000,000, of these bonds would be offered American subscribers. France will take 40 per cent and Germany and Great Britain each 20 per cent. The countries subscribing have the right to place part of their allotments in other countries.

The German share in the proceeds of $100,000,000 will replace a loan already contracted for in connection with the Kruger match concession. This may change the proportions of allotments to different countries, since if the match loan had been floated in the United States it would have amounted to more than the 20 per cent of the reparation bonds which had figured as the American allotment in all calculations.

The Germans had resisted the French demand that Germany promise not to seek credit abroad until the reparations bonds issue was safely out of the way. The plan agreed upon is therefore a compromise.

East Prodded by Snowden.

There now remains only the necessity of obtaining settlement of the eastern reparations problem between Austria, Bulgaria and Hungary and their creditors to take the reparations question completely off the diplomatic hooks.

Under the prodding of British Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden the countries concerned in the eastern problem buckled down tonight to a persistent attempt to find solution. Whether or not they succeed by Monday morning the protocol of adoption will be signed in a formal session of the conference at the Binnenhef on Monday morning.

Representatives of the delegations tonight were scurrying about to make reservations on trains and steamers leaving on Monday. Several of the chief delegates will hasten to London for the naval conference opening the next day while the rank and file return to their homelands.

Finley Will Run For Robsion Post

Election of Former House Member's Son Likely in Kentucky.

Corbin, Ky., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—The son of a former representative probably will represent the Eleventh District of Kentucky in the House of Representatives.

A Republican caucus here today selected Charles Finley, 64, of Williamsburg, an attorney, as its candidate for the House seat held by Representative John M. Robsion, appointed to the Senate seat vacated by Frederick M. Sackett, new Ambassador to Germany. A Democrat never has been elected from this district.

No Democrats have announced for the office and political leaders expressed doubt that a Democratic caucus will be held.

Mr. Finley owns and publishes the Whitely Republican, a weekly newspaper, and is interested in the banking business, besides practicing law.

In 1883 he was elected to the General Assembly, and from 1895 to 1899 he served as secretary of state under W. O. Bradley. In 1900, following the assassination of Gov. Goebel, he took refuge in Indiana, returning nine years later.

Illinois Man Heads Lutheran Council

$69,000 Budget to Continue Service and Emergency Relief Adopted.

New York, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Dr. G. A. Brandelle, of Rock Island, Ill., was elected president of the National Lutheran Council at the twelfth annual meeting today.

Other officers elected for 1930 were Dr. C. Hein, Columbus, Ohio, vice president; the Rev. N. C. Carlsen, Royal, Iowa, secretary, and E. F. Ellert, New York, treasurer. Dr. Ralph D. Long, of Columbus, stewardship secretary of the Lutheran Joint Synod of Ohio, was made executive director of the national council.

The convention adopted a $69,000 budget to continue its world service and emergency relief during the coming year and voted $15,000 annually for a three-year period to enable the Lutheran world convention to carry on its work.

A fund of $50,000, to be contributed by the Lutheran churches in America, will be used for the maintenance of the Lutheran Church of Russia and the assistance of struggling Lutheran churches in the smaller countries of Europe.

were instructed to obtain other medical treatment by February 1, if possible. Mrs. McCormick alleged at the hearing that the psychoanalytical treatments were a waste of her husband's fortune, which is estimated at $50,000,000, alienated his affection for her, and failed to improve his mental condition.

Judge Dehy said he believed the differences were the result of "honest opinions" and that the guardians had been "sincere" in all their efforts. His opinion went into a voluminous review of the case since Mr. McCormick was adjudged incompetent, in 1908.

The guardians, who were in the courtroom at the time, refused to comment, and the defense made no appeal from the decision.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

THAT is an intriguing idea that Representative Maas, of Minnesota, has. The more one thinks of it the more he realizes its boundless possibilities. Mr. Maas', plan, briefly, is that inasmuch as the regularly constituted committees of the House will never grant hearings for the measures introduced by the wets, that they hold the hearings themselves.

Every session the wets pour bills and resolutions into the basket and never hear from them again. There are measures to repeal the eighteenth amendment, to modify it, to provide light wines and beers, to set up a system of Government control and whatnot.

But what good does it avail these bill preparers to prepare such bills as these? The chairmen of the various committees, or, rather, the clerks, file them away without even reading them.

* * * *

NOW the wets have an unofficial committee. They meet periodically in any vacant office they can find. More recently they have been meeting just across from the barber shop downstairs, and this has always seemed like a fitting setting to us. It suggests the days and the atmosphere of the old Barber Shop Chord.

But the point is that the committee meets. Now, inasmuch as the regular House committees are so discourteous, why doesn't this wet committee go right ahead and conduct hearings on the various wet proposals? It could get witnesses galore, good witnesses, witnesses who would pay their own way, and, of course, they would have to do that. But certainly it could get witnesses if the Caraway lobby committee can.

* * * *

IT is Mr. Maas' plan, though, just to hold these hearings for the propaganda good they would serve. The question is raised, however, as to why the matter should be stopped there.

Why should not this committee go ahead and report one of the many bills, either one to repeal the eighteenth amendment, or one to bring back light wines and beer? Then, after reporting this bill favorably, why should the committee not continue with the legislative procedure, go ahead, pass and enact the measure?

Then all the people would have to do would be to decide just which Congress they wanted to follow, that headed by Speaker Longworth or that headed by Representative Linthicum, who is the chairman of the wets. Once the decision was made there should be no further trouble.

* * * *

A MAN arrested with a bottle in his pocket could simply give the cop the old horse laugh. "Ha, ha," he could explain, "I'm abiding by the wet Congress," and go on about his way.

There is no reason why there should not be two Congresses in a democracy anyway. Certainly, the present one does not satisfy the wets. Apparently, it was set up for the express and sole gratification of the drys. There should be such a congressional arrangement that would protect, as Mr. Hoover would say, both the producer and the consumer. It has become manifest that the present Congress can not satisfy both sides. The only solution is to carry Mr. Maas' proposal to its ultimate conclusion and set up another one.

ANTIFASCIST PRISON DELIVERY IS NIPPED

Spies Bare Plot Fomented in Paris by Duce's Foes; Explosives Seized.

NIGHT RAID WAS PLANNED

Paris, Jan. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A plot for the wholesale delivery of the Italian political prisoners held captive in Premier Mussolini's convict camps on the Lipari Islands near Sicily, from which Francesco Nitti, nephew of the former Prime Minister of Italy, escaped last summer, was revealed this morning by the French security police.

The exploit was nipped in the bud on information received from spies in the anti-Fascist organization in Paris. But the conspiracy had the fascinating glamour of an Alexandre Dumas episode.

The anti-Fascists here had chartered motorboats and stocked them heavily with explosives, ammunition and machine guns. They had planned to swoop down on the islands in a nocturnal raid, liberate the several hundreds of fellow opponents of the Fascist regime, and capture the guards, who are especially chosen from among the most reliable blackshirt police.

Massacre as Alternative.

These Mussolini men were then to be dropped off on uninhabited, bare, sunscorched rocks in the Mediterranean, out of sight of passing ships and off the trade routes, and left to their fate.

In the event of their plot to capture the guards failing, it was planned to blow up every building on the Lipari Islands, massacre the police, and bring back the liberated prisoners to France.

Among the prominent Italians arrested in connection with the plot are Alberto Cianca, former member of the Italian Parliament; Giuseppi Sardelli and Alberto Tarchiano, all radicals and bitter enemies of the Mussolini regime. Large supplies of explosives found in their apartments were admittedly destined to blow up the Italian delegation to the League of Nations conference at Geneva.

Police believe that the great Lipari jailbreak plot was inspired by the miraculous escape of Prof. Carlo Rosselli, Emilio Lusso and young Nitti, who swam to liberty on a June night last year.

Political Crisis Forming.

The big dash, in which it is said a hundred determined men were to have taken part, including members of all of the prominent Italian families exiled since the Fascisti gained power, was to have been made from Marseille, where many boats, discovered hidden along the little-frequented stretches of the French Riviera, are being seized.

A serious political situation is developing between France and Italy over the several hundred thousand anti-Fascisti who have sought asylum in France. Furthermore, the grave differences over the rival naval programs, which are certain to arise at the forthcoming disarmament conference at London, are not conducive to temper the Fascist anger as expressed persistently in the Rome newspapers, which accuse France of making it easy for the anti-Mussolini plotters.

Thousands of Italian exiles in France belong to secret organizations, which, it is reported, are determined to overthrow the duce and will not hesitate to use terrorism to gain their ends.

REPORT SHOWS DEATH IN PLANE FATALITIES

for each 1,022,371 miles flown where, in 1928, only 896,822 miles were flown for each fatal accident.

In contrast to the number of accidents laid to pilots' errors, the second largest item was power plant failures, causing 18.08 per cent of accidents. Airplane structural failures contributed 8.80 per cent, and miscellaneous, including weather and darkness, 9.25 per cent.

While Maj. Young made no recommendations for reducing accidents due to pilots, military aviation has placed the problem in the hands of individual aviators.

Overconfidence was found to be the greatest cause of crashes, and with overzealousness, accounted for 75 per cent of air corps accidents alone.

Maj. Young's report was based on the findings of the accident board of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, composed of two expert pilots, a flight surgeon, an aeronautical engineer, a lawyer versed in air law, and a statistician.

PARLEY ON CUSTOMS REFUSED BY CANADA

Declination of Invitation to Conference Is Handed League of Nations.

U. S. WATCHES DOINGS

Geneva, Jan. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Canada's refusal to participate in the customs truce conference was handed to the League of Nations tonight. This makes the British dominions, with the exception of Ireland, unanimous in boycotting Briand's and the Laborites' proposal to declare a tariff truce for the alleviation of Europe's economic and undustrial ills.

However, it was learned that both Canada and the United States will have "unofficial observers" at the conference. Washington is reported to be in almost daily communication with the league to determine the drift the conference will take and what is going on behind the scenes.

The acceptances of Lithuania and Japan today make 28 states now participating in the league's attempt immediately to stabilize tariffs as a first step toward the establishment of a European economic federation.

Japan and Cuba are the only non-European countries actively represented, although Brazil and Santo Domingo are sending official observers. Count Von Moltke, former foreign minister of Denmark, has accepted the presidency of the conference. Albania is the only European country unrepresented.

One of the most significant features of the forthcoming discussions is the lifting of the conference from the exclusive realm of economists and industrialists so that competent political leaders may take part.

The cabinet ministers of various states already have been chosen as delegates. Where the tendency in the United States is to take the tariff out of politics, Europe is taking a distinctly opposite direction.

The chief object of the pourparlers, which begin February 17, is to prepare the groundwork for European industrial cooperation during the coming decade, according to informed observers. For the first time it has been revealed authoritatively that collective resentment against Washington's tariff policies started the movement that Briand crystallized.

Taft Takes Walk; Refuses to Be Ill

Doctors Say Condition Is Good as Chief Justice Breaks Routine.

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the United States and its twenty-seventh President, declines to consider himself a sick man, although sent here by his physician for rest and recuperation.

The Chief Justice made that clear today as he abandoned his prescribed routine of absolute quiet, broken only by automobile rides, to take a short walk about the countryside. This morning he joined guests at the Grove Park Inn, where he is staying, and chatted with them for a time.

Mr. Taft also went for an automobile ride, and appeared in particularly good spirits when he returned from an hour's outing.

The windows of his suite of rooms overlook the golf course of the Asheville Country Club, and the Chief Justice asserted laughingly that he might add golf to his routine in the near future.

Dr. P. R. Terry and Dr. Paul Ringer, who are attending him, said after their regular visit today that their patient's condition was "very satisfactory."

French Plea to Release Communists Is Denied

Paris, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—The ministry of Premier Andre Tardieu, in the absence of its leader, today scored two victories in the French Parliament. The deputies voted, 309 to 256, to support the government against a Communist demand for release from jail of three Communist deputies.

The second victory was the apparent winning of the support of the Radical party in the Chamber. The party president, Eduard Daladier, had held it stanchly in opposition to M. Tardieu, after M. Daladier himself had failed to form a cabinet. Today the party elected as its new leader Camille Chautemps, and it was understood he was ready to talk business with M. Tardieu on lines acceptable to the premier.

Guns Seized, Five Held In Albanian Rebel Plot

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Jan. 17 (A.P.). The newspaper Pravda in a dispatch from Debar, on the Albanian frontier, today said that gendarmes had located an arsenal containing 10,000 rifles and other war stores and had arrested five Albanian chiefs on charges of plotting a rebellion against King Zog.

Fascinating Persian Art in Persian Earthenware

Clay is one of Persia's favorite mediums. Since the earliest days of civilization the Persian has been known for his deftness and understanding . . . his artistic revelations of earthenware art. Here, in our Art Section, you may see many pieces, made years ago—and many modern reproductions made by the younger generations of Persians, who continue the art of their illustrious ancestors.

Old Persian Oil Jars . . . .

are on exhibit. Beautiful tiles that may be used as decorations for modern rooms and fireplaces . . . some large enough to be distinctive tops to useful little wrought iron tables we scatter about our rooms and solariums; artistic jugs and vases . . . all reveal the favorite literature, the favorite fruits, games and lives of their Persian creators.

Sketched above . . . This unique and artistic jar was created to hold the spoons of an old Persian family. Notice the fish symbols . . . they typify happiness. Can you not imagine your flowers in just such a romantic and important vase? It is only $10.

There seems to be no limit to the Persian's color combinations, or the subjects he can devise . . . he scorns repetition. See his originality and art in this display.

Dewey Dinner Is Canceled by Polish Envoy

Financial Adviser Wires Illness in Family Has Changed Plans.

By JEAN ELIOT.

THE Minister of Poland, Mr. Tytus Filipowicz, has recalled invitations for the dinner and reception he was to give on Friday evening, January 24, in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey. The decision to cancel the party was made on receipt of a telegram from Mr. Dewey, financial adviser to the Polish government, who is now in Chicago, announcing that, because of serious illness in his family, he would be forced to postpone his proposed visit to Washington.

It was impossible for the minister to put off the hospitality, as he expects to leave Washington on January 25 for Mexico to present his credentials as Polish Minister to Mexico and to attend the inauguration of Senor Ortiz Rubio as President of Mexico. He will make the journey to Mexico City via Florida, arriving in time to be formally received on February 3 or 4.

With Poland's diplomatic mission in Washington raised to an embassy, Mr. Filipowicz has been chosen as his country's first Ambassador to the United States. His credentials are now on their way to Washington and, if they arrive in time, he will be received by President Hoover as a duly accredited ambassador before his departure for Mexico.

The bill authorizing the elevation of the United States legation at Warsaw to an embassy and the appointment of an ambassador is now before the Congress and must be passed before President Hoover can choose a man to be the first United States Ambassador to Poland. Mr. John B. Stetson has been serving as minister at Warsaw. He has made many friends among the Poles, has steeped himself in the romantic history of the country and has even learned something of the extremely difficult language.

It will be remembered that news that a reciprocal exchange of ambassadors between Poland and the United States first broke when the Pulaski centennial celebration was held in this country in the autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey, who are in this country on a brief vacation, are due to sail early in February for Europe on the first lap of their journey back to Warsaw. So it is possible that the illness which caused them to postpone their visit to Washington may prevent their coming at all. This would be a cause of great disappointment, for they have many friends here, made when Mr. Dewey was serving as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and when their house was a center of generous hospitality.

Their daughter, Miss Suzette Dewey, who made her debut in Washington, was married in Warsaw to Mr. Frederick Moulton Alger, jr., of Detroit, and now lives in the Polish capital, Mr. Alger having a post under Mr. Dewey in reorganizing the finances of Poland.

Mr. and Mrs. Barton Are Hoover Guests.

The President and Mrs. Hoover had Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Barton as White House guests over last night.

Vice President Curtis will be the guest in whose honor Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose will entertain at dinner this evening in her apartment at the Mayflower when covers will be laid for 20. Mrs. Loose also had guests with her at dinner last evening at the hotel.

The Italian Ambassador and Nobil Donna Antonietta de Martino entertained at luncheon Thursday at the embassy when their guests were Senator William H. King, Representative Platt Andrew, Mrs. Charles Greeley Abbott, Dr. and Mrs. Allen Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bennett, Dr. Henry Washington, Mr. Paul Wilstach, Mrs. Cecilia Mocatta, Second Counselor of the Embassy, and Signora Catalani, First Secretary of the Embassy, Signor Leonardo Vitetti and the Secretary of the Embassy, Nobile Carlo Andrea Soardi.

The French Ambassador, M. Paul Claudel, went to New York last evening to attend the banquet of the Society of the Cincinnati. Today Mme. Claudel and Mme. Reine Claudel will go to New York to join the Ambassador and to attend the performance at the Metropolitan Opera for the benefit of the French Hospital. They will return on Monday. On Thursday they will again go to New York for the ball given in their honor aboard the French liner Paris, which has been reconditioned after the recent fire.

The Minister of Panama, Senor Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, has returned to Washington from Atlantic City, where he passed several days.

Mrs. Grosvenor H. Backus gave a luncheon yesterday at the National Woman's Country Club, her guests remaining afterward for bridge.

Many other club members had bridge luncheons, among them Mrs. Robert Kennon Smith, who had as guests Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Albert J. Brosseau, Mrs. William Sherman Walker, Mrs. William Wolfe Smith, Mrs. James Stanfield, Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, Mrs. Percy Hickling, Mrs. Frank R. Curtis, Mrs. Denwood White and Miss Toussaint Dubois. This was the first of a series of small luncheons to be given by Mrs. Smith in the nature of a "farewell" to her Washington friends. Mrs. Smith, whose second book will be off the press in the early spring, will close her apartment at 1861 Crescent place, and sail for France, where she will continue her writing.

Mrs. Charles J. Williamson, of Wardman Park Hotel, will entertain at a luncheon today at the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Bostrom Fete U. S. Minister.

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom entertained at dinner last night for twenty guests asked to meet the former United States Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Leland Harrison, who have been visiting in Washington as guests of Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon. They will leave shortly for Montivideo, Mr. Harrison having been appointed United States Minister to Uruguay.

Maj. Guy M. Standifer, of New York City, who is well known in Washington, where he lived for some time, is a guest at the Willard.

Dinner Parties Are Arranged For Bal Night

Many Hostesses to Have Box Guests at Arts Club Event.

With the famous Bal Boheme of the Arts Club set for Monday, January 27, at the Willard, prominent hostesses of the Capital are rapidly completing arrangements for box parties at the ball, which are in many cases to be preceded by dinner parties.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John A. Hull will occupy the box reserved by Mrs. George Mesta, who will not return to the city from New York until after the ball, and will have among their guests on that occasion the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Ferrara, and the Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley.

Mrs. Frank C. Henry, who will occupy a box with Mr. and Mrs. Warren Akers, will entertain as her guests Senator Arthur Capper, Col. and Mrs. Allen W. Gullion, and Capt. John M. Wier.

Other well known Washington women who will occupy boxes at the ball, entertaining guests, are Mrs. Christian Heurich, Mrs. Stokes-Hallett, Miss Frances Benjamin Johnston, Mrs. J. T. Oliphant, Mrs. Frederic A. Parkhurst, Mrs. O. B. Campbell, Mrs. John H. Coxhead, Mrs. Asa E. Phillips, and Mrs. John Crayke Simpson.

One of the features of the Bal Boheme is the "supper surprise" which each year is arranged by Mr. Henry Jay Staley, of the executive committee, with the Willard chef.

Rehearsals of the big cast of more than 200 Washington artists, actors, dancers and others will continue throughout the week, with a big ensemble rehearsal tomorrow afternoon at the studio of Miss Caroline McKinley, and a final costume and lights and music rehearsal next Sunday at the Willard under the direction of Mr. William F. Baker, assisted by Miss McKinley, director of dances; Mrs. Marie Moore Forerst, chairman of music, and others.

Mrs. Milton C. Garber, wife of Representative Garber, and their small daughter have returned to Washington for the remainder of the session of Congress from their home in Enid, Okla., and are at the Mayflower.

Paulina Sits For Portrait By Girl Pair

De Hellebranth Sisters Doing Daughter of Speaker.

Paulina Longworth is sitting for her portrait—twin portraits, in fact, for both Miss Elena de Hellebranth and Miss Berta de Hellebranth are painting the magnetic small daughter of the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Although a sketch or two of Paulina have previously been made, this is the first time she has had regular sittings and her almost daily visits, under escort of her mother, to the studio of the de Hellebranth girls in the La Salle are occasions of great enjoyment to the artists, who find the lass a most stimulating subject.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY

Capital Society Enters Pre-Lenten Round of Gayety.

the Misses de Hellebranth are becoming widely known in this country for the brilliance of their work, which has been exhibited in many cities, and for the contrast in technique and in character reading displayed by the two girls in portraits made from the same person and at the same sittings. This is well exemplified in the portraits of Paulina, even in their present uncompleted stage, for Miss Berta de Hellebranth, whose brush work is fine, has caught the child in a pensive mood and her sister, who has a bolder style, has seized upon an expression of impish merriment.

Mrs. Longworth has promised to sit for the Misses de Hellebranth—in a lacquer red gown. And when this portrait is completed the girls will have done the entire family, for sketches of the Speaker were made when they were on a previous visit to Washington and were included in the exhibition which they held recently at the Yorke Galleries.

In the presence of the German Ambassador, Herr von Prittwitz, and the Bulgarian Minister, Mr. Radeff, an exhibition of portraits by Prof. Michallow will be formally opened on Monday at 4 o'clock in the Chinese room of the Mayflower.

Prof. Michallow is exhibiting portraits of many prominent persons living in Washington, among them the Ambassador of Germany, Frau von Prittwitz, the Minister of Bulgaria, Frau Kiep, and Dr. Stephen Panaretoff.

Mrs. David Hunt Blair left last night for North Carolina, where she will be for the week-end. She will join Mr. Blair in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel on Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Blair will sail on the S. S. Kungsholm on February 1 for a cruise to the West Indies.

Social Events Feature Opera Engagement.

Post-opera supper parties and pre-opera dinners are being arranged in connection with the American Opera Company's engagement, which opens on Monday evening at Poli's Theater. Several of the box holders are among those who will entertain.

As announced by Mrs. Joseph Leiter, chairman of the committee of sponsors, and Mrs. John Hill, vice chairman, the group of box holders for one or another of the four performances includes:

The German Ambassador and Frau von Prittwitz, Senora de Ferrara, Senora de Davila, Senora de Alfaro, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Bryce Allen, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Capt. and Mrs. John H. Gibbons, Mrs. Parker Corning, Mrs. George Eckels, Mrs. Copley Amory, Col. Spencer Wise, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. Armistead Peter 3d, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Gary Johnson, Mrs. Tracy Lay, Mrs. James J. Hogan, Mrs. T. H. Morhart, Mrs. Walter Wheatley, Mrs. E. Newlands Johnson, Mrs. James Parker, Mrs. Chandler P. Anderson, Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mrs. Matthew Dick, Mrs. H. H. Barton, Mrs. Charles B. Howry, Mrs. William D. Morgan, Mrs. Charles Denby, Mrs. Thomas Reed, Mrs. H. B. Spencer, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Kent Legare and Mrs. William C. Foster.

Great interest has been evinced by the sponsors and subscribers in the new American opera, "Yolanda of Cyprus," which will be given for the first time in Washington on Monday evening.

Mrs. David S. Ingalls, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics, will be at home for the first time this season on Wednesday from 4:30 until 6:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingalls will entertain at dinner on January 31 in honor of the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Charles F. Hughes.

Mrs. George H. Calvert, jr., and her young daughters, Miss Eleanor Calvert and Miss Margaret Calvert, left Washington yesterday for West Point, where the girls will attend the hop to be given tonight at the Military Academy.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

JANUARY 18.
"CAPRICORN."

IF January 18 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to noon, from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:20 p. m.

The planetary aspects are favorable and there will be more smiles than tears on this date. Much affection will be shown, especially from those of the opposite sex, and hearts will be quickened and gladdened by kind and loving words. Time will be more devoted to pleasure than business.

A child born on this January 18 will have a friendly disposition and will be truly democratic. It will be both physically and mentally active, a good student, a hard worker and ambitious. It will be extremely fond of music.

Your astrological picture displays a love of intrigue and a spirit of adventure. Your journey through this plane of existence will not be a dull one, and you will have a wealth of experience, the only wealth which really counts. You have a wholesome philosophy of life, which enables you to take everything as it comes—in your work, your play, your love or marriage, you are ready to take the bitter with the sweet and not grouse about it.

As an organizer you should excel, as you have the gift of appealing to and handling fellow beings. You are able to size up things quickly and to form quick decisions. You are both logical and practical and, although you are daring, you are not foolhardy. Your successes in life will only be earned through personal effort, and not through "pull" or blind luck. You have a love for the artistic and sufficient talent to win recognition through an artistic channel. It is not probable that you will use this talent other than as a hobby. Considerable money will pass through your hands, but you will never amass a fortune.

You are not easily carried away by your emotions and you do not get "cases" on people whom you casually meet. You will not easily fall in love and you will probably not make an early marriage.

Successful people born January 18: Daniel Webster, statesman.

Charles P. McIlvaine, P. E. Bishop of Ohio.

Richard Yates, statesman, the war Governor of Illinois.

Walter Satterlee, artist.

Seth Low, former president Columbia University, Mayor of New York.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

"They Want the Column!"

HAVE you written us as to whether you want a column of advice to men in this space twice a week? Send in your opinion. These women want it, and want it to be good and strong. What do you want? Cleo started it. Cleo said it just made her mad to be always reading advice to women, when the big burly men like the husband she just left, were the ones who needed advice. Cleo has a terrible opinion of men, and so it seems has Claire!

"A column for men! Well, it's about time. And tell them how a wife feels when she gets the same miserable pittance to run a house regardless of how the family increases. My husband is 14 years older than I am, and earns well. When we were married he gave me $20 every saturday to run the house. At that time the family consisted of his invalid father and little daughter by his first marriage and ourselves. We now have three children and I still get $20 and no more. I pay insurance, gas and light and phone as well as all food bills. He makes more money every year and we have had a child every year. I get five quarts of milk a day, and we use eight pounds of butter a week. My neighbor considers me lucky, her husband is so much meaner than mine. So both of us are strong for a column where wives can air their beloved husband's generous ways and be sure that the husbands will read what they say. CLAIRE."

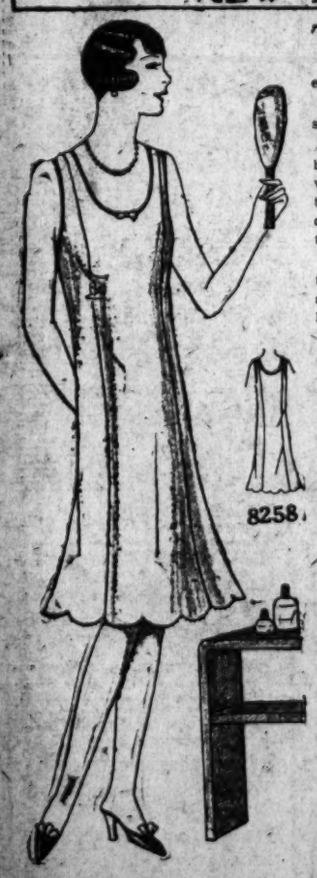
And Prudence has one of those things called husbands, too, and so Prudence wants that column and wants it good and strong.

"Yes! Yes! Start the column for these men to read about themselves, the mean, petty, cheating creatures. But make it good and strong or it will do more harm than good. I think you are too lenient with the men. You make too many allowances and they make none for a woman. My husband expects just as good a dinner on Monday as on Sunday. He expects my clothes to look just as fresh after six monhts' wear as when first bought. He expects a hat to be worn till it is worn out. He expects me to stint on the house so that he can play poker and lose. He expects me to smile sweetly after he has spent the evenings flattering some woman friend of mine. He expects me to do my marketing whether he leaves money or not, and expects me to look upon him with awe and respect when I know he is small and mean and untruthful. I think he is a mess, and our 12-year-old son shows in many ways that he thinks the same.

"I would like to see these husbands in print. And if you start that column two days a week you'll end up by having to run it seven, for the wives will welcome the chance to relieve their minds and see the men told some plain truths about themselves. But make it strong. "PRUDENCE."

This column is for you! Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help all who read this page. Express your views and help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

Fifth Ave. Fashions NEW YORK



THE charming princess slip has now made its debut in fashionable circles. It is just part of every smart woman's wardrobe.

It is indispensable for the new slim silhouette frocks.

Its molded line hugs the figure beautifully to well below the hips, with a graceful flare toward hem, that is finished with picot edge for dainty sheer effect so important for the frock of irregular hemline.

It serves as a lovely foundation for the sheer velvet and fishnet frocks, as it will not cause any conflicting lines to the outer garment.

It is especially practical for the silk crepe frock with the raised waistline.

Style No. 8258 is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. You can make it at a small outlay, for it takes but 2⅛ yards of 35-inch material with 2 yards of binding for the woman of average figure.

Black washable crepe is economical choice, for it can be worn nicely with several different costumes.

New deep shade in peach or suntan satin crepe will make an excellent gift. To add further French chic, trim the peach slip in black Chantilly lace along lower edge in 4-inch width with neckline outlined in 2-inch width, which may also be used to trim armholes. FOUR ARCTIC PLANES LAND NEAR SPOKANE

One Transport and Three Pursuit Airships Finish Test Flight.

SNOW DELAYS 13 SHIPS

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Four planes of the Army's Arctic patrol flew over Spokane today, completing their trip from Selfridge Field, Mich.

Soaring across the icy continental divide, three pursuit ships and one transport plane, the vanguard of the winter flight patrol, landed on the ice at Newman Lake, near here, at 12:52 p. m., after a flight from Kalispell, Mont.

The sun flashed on a blanket of snow as the planes droned over the city, but the temperature was relatively warm. The three Curtiss Hawks were flown by Lieuts. Wolf, Putt and Warburton, while Pilots Shanahan and Duke were at the controls of the trimotored transport, which carried nine mechanics.

Freeze Planes to Ice.

The quartet slid down on the ten inches of ice at Honeymoon Bay, which formed the airport. It was marked with stripes of orange cloth. Mechanics swished buckets of water upon the planes' skis as the ships stopped. The water froze the planes to the ice, so that there was no danger of wind whipping them from their moorings.

Meanwhile, Maj. Ralph Royce, commander of the Arctic patrol which is testing winter flying equipment, and thirteen others planes, waited at Great Falls, Mont., for a moderation of subzero weather.

The crowd was thrilled as Lieut. Putt, with one ski dangling, broken, tilted his little ship almost on the right wing to make a perfect "two-point landing."

Five other planes in the group, which left Selfridge Field January 8, were delayed by mishaps east of Great Falls.

Snow Stops 13 Ships.

Great Falls, Mont., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Lack of equipment to combat subzero weather for a 40-mile wind which whipped snow about so violently as to make work on motors virtually impossible, for the fourth consecutive day, delayed departure today of thirteen pursuit planes of the Army's Arctic patrol from the Municipal Airport here. Four planes of the patrol reached Spokane today after a 250-mile flight from Kalispell, Mont.

Twenty-two planes left Selfridge Field, Mich., more than a week ago on the projected 3,700-mile flight to Spokane and return.

The unsuccessful attempt to continue the flight from Great Falls today caused Maj. Ralph Royce, in command of the planes, to express the opinion that ships isolated by Rocky Mountain weather were in a worse predicament than probably would prevail in actual warfare.

Electrical heating devices no doubt would solve the problem of warming motors, in the opinion of Maj. Royce. Thus far, a boiler furnished by city officials has been used to warm motors here and considerable time is required.

As on four previous nights, Maj. Royce tonight said good-by and expressed the hope that the ships here would start for Spokane via Kalispell tomorrow. It was understood, however, that should the continental divide continue to prove too much of an obstacle, the ships might fly to Spokane via Helena and Missoula.

The 22 ships of the original squadron tonight were distributed along a front of 1,500 miles.

Eight Mice Are Found With Home in Radio Set

Rahway, N. J., Jan. 17 (N.Y.W. N.S.).—Many things have come out of radio sets, but Albert G. Avery got a mother mouse and a litter of seven young mice out of his today.

Avery started to investigate a short circuit in his set and found that it resulted from the presence of two dead mice which had been electrocuted by the bare wires. The mother and remaining five were comfortably settled in a nest which she had made in the built-in speaker.

'Perfumed' Robber, 26, Is Given 15 to 40 Years

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Lloyd L. Fathers, 26, identified by fifteen victims as the "perfumed" housebreaker accused by police of attacking more than 30 Seattle, Tacoma and Everett, Wash., girls in their homes at night, sobbed in superior court today as he was sentenced to 15 to 40 years in the State Penitentiary.

Fathers was tried on burglary charges, the prosecutor's office declaring the reticence of girls to testify had made it impracticable to bring more serious charges. Fathers was arrested in Wisconsin.

WORK ON BRIDGE

Contract Bridge.

WITH the development of Contract Bridge has come also the development of the Goulash. When the official Laws of Contract were adopted in 1927 the Goulash was incorporated as an optional feature and since that time many prominent clubs have forbidden its use in their card rooms. Socially, however, it has been very popular and has been generally used.

The optional Goulash law referred to provides that in case a deal is passed out, the players must arrange their cards in suits and the cards of each suit according to value. The four hands, thus arranged, are stacked face down, the dealer's at the bottom and the others' around the table to the right; then without shuffling and with only one cut, the cards are dealt in two batches of five to each player and than a final batch of three.

Some players are so anxious to increase the element of luck and so fond of risking the larger gains and losses incident to a Goulash, that they throw out a regular deal and play a Goulash every time the bidding fails to result in a game-going declaration. That is not allowed by the laws, and it eliminates the attractive feature of bidding with a partial score. Should this custom be adopted generally, particularly if the "passing" custom referred to below is added, the Goulash is apt to transform a scientific game into mere brute force.

Recently another novelty has been added which consists of the interchange of cards between players after a Goulash deal and before the Goulash bidding. Absurd as this may seem on its face, it has found considerable favor—especially feminine favor—and has become of sufficient importance to warrant its being the subject of our discussion next Saturday.

HULST GLENN DIES OF HEART ATTACK

WAS NATIVE OF VIRGINIA

Hulst Glenn, 58 years old, member of the committee on tax appeals and reviews of the Treasury Department and secretary of the Fraternal Order of Eagles of Virginia, died of heart failure, at 2:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in his residence at the Portner Apartments, Fifteenth and U streets northwest.

He collapsed suddenly in his offices Thursday morning and died without regaining consciousness. Funeral services will be held at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning in St. Paul's Catholic Church, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, with interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Glenn was a native of Staunton, Va., where he practiced law for more than 30 years after attending Augusta Military Academy and graduating from the law school of the University of Virginia. During his residence there he served at various times as exalted ruler and secretary of the Elks, secretary of the Knights of Columbus, and secretary of the Eagles. In Staunton he also served as United States Commissioner and as police justice.

Upon moving to Washington about 10 years ago he continued to hold the office of secretary of the Fraternal Order of Eagles in Virginia. Entering the Treasury Department as a tax reviewer, he served several years and then assumed the duties on the committee which he served at his death.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Glenn, he is survived by eight children, including Hulst, jr., Mrs. Gertrude Meegan, Mrs. Margaret Slater, Mrs. Miriam Ruppert, Miss Dorothy and Miss Carmel Glenn, all of Washington; and both William L. and Hugh Glenn, of Atlanta, Ga.

Funeral of Mrs. McKinley's Former Physician Is Scheduled.

Funeral services of Dr. Rice Kemper McClanahan, noted physician of Colorado Springs, Colo., and personal physician during the McKinley administration to Mrs. William McKinley, will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon with full military honors in Arlington Cemetery.

Dr. McClanahan, 55 years old and a native of near Culpeper, Va., died in this city Tuesday. He was a retired lieutenant commander of the Navy. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sadie Stearns McClanahan.

Capital Whistler To Cross Country

Henry Rose Wagers He Can "Warble" His Passage to West Coast.

With only a small grip containing a change of clothes as luggage, Henry Rose, "the Caruso of Whistling" and protege of Eddie Cantor, plans to leave Washington within the next few days to hitchhike and whistle his way to the Pacific Coast.

A wager with a sportsman friend in New York prompted Mr. Rose to undertake his unusual trip. Under the stipulation of the wager, he must not pay anything for transportation nor accept contracts for theater work while en route. He can, however, appear at night clubs and other entertainments working without a contract. He must complete his trip within 15 months.

Mr. Rose and his manager, Sidney Carp, yesterday were busy outlining their route which will be through the Southern and Southwestern sections of the country. They probably will make Richmond their first stop after leaving Washington.

Trail of Matches Labels Thief Here

Robber Gains Sobriquet by Use of Lucifers in His Thefts.

Police last night were reported to be hot on the trail of a thief who uses matches to find his way about in the homes he robs.

The thief is said to have entered at least twenty places. In every instance, a trail of burned matches has been left behind. Consequently, the marauder has earned the sobriquet of "the burned match thief."

The most recent activity of the "burned match thief" was reported yesterday by Baxter Ashley, of 732 Marrietta place northwest. Mr. Ashley said that the pantry of his home had been ransacked, and $12 stolen. A trail of burned matches was left behind, police of the Thirteenth Precinct discovered.

Maid Grabbed by Man, Is Report to Police

The furnace at the home of John J. O'Connor, 606 Emerson street northwest, was functioning perfectly throughout the cold spell yesterday, but, despite this, a man applied at the kitchen door of the home and insisted that the furnace needed repairing, according to a report given police by the colored maid at the home.

The servant told police that when she told the man that the furnace did not require attention, that he grabbed her. She screamed and the man ran away, she told police. The maid said that the man carried a monkey wrench.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

THIS morning at 9:30 o'clock, the Rialto Theater, Andy Sharick managing director, in conjunction with the Knighthood of Youth department of the Junior Post section of the Sunday Washington Post, will present the first of a series of special juvenile programs for the entertainment of the young character builders who have become members of The Post's Knighthood round table.

Mr. Sharick, who has had wide experience in this particular aspect of theater conduct as an officer of the Boy Scout movement in New York State, has shrewdly assembled a bill which, while carefully previewed by a committee composed largely of feminine members and heartily indorsed by them as splendid diversion for audiences of children, will be found to lack nothing in those elements of diversified and red-blooded entertainment so dear to the youthful heart.

The major attraction will be "His First Command," the regular screen feature of the current bill at the Rialto—a story of cavalry life at Fort Riley, Kans., executed partly in natural colors with bands playing, horses prancing, and the like. There will also be shown a two-reel, "Oswald, the Rabbit" cartoon comedy; a mountain scenic subject, with musical interpolations, in which the Government sets forth some of its exciting provisions for fire control, and a two-reel Western drama, alive with action, but wholly devoid of gunplay, "rough stuff" and those fantastic glorifications of law defiance that once characterized a majority of the photoplays made with the Old West as a background.

A record audience is assured for the first of the Rialto-Post Saturday morning juvenile programs, since all of the coveted tickets long since were absorbed by the eager Knighthood of Youth enrollment. Parents with small children will be admitted free of charge, although special provision has been made for the comfort and safety of all who attend, regardless of age.

Norma Shearer is the next luminary of the screen to make a personal visit to the National Capital, on a mission akin to that which placed Tom Mix picturesquely in our midst for a week. Miss Shearer might have done far worse than time her jaunt to coincide with the premiere presentation of "Their Own Desire," the current screen attraction at the Palace.

Unless his long absence from the local battleground has made a difference, it may be of interest to know that Tom Moore, Washington's pioneer picture exhibitor and present owner of the Rialto Theater property, is for the time being making his home in New York City, with the Ambassador Hotel as his place of residence.

I suspect that T. M. is marketing that trick chemical concoction that vastly multiplies the life of film, renders it all but fireproof, improves the sound of talking pictures, is good for falling arches, will remove the paint from a plow, curl your hair or get you more miles to the gallon than a leaky gas main and a match.

I haven't heard where his "pitch" is.

If you hear a fanfare of brass and a booming of drums on F street today, it probably will not be, as you think, an out-of-season Fourth of July or a presidential inauguration, or anything like that.

I should say not! It will be much more important than any of that minor league stuff!

It seems that Wesley Eddy, who returns to the scene of his 75-week triumph as master of ceremonies today for a single week as guest m. c., recently joined the B. P. O. E.—which is slang for Elks—in Brooklyn, and tonight is being celebrated as Elks' Night at Loew's Palace, to welcome the kid "home." All that ta-ra-ra-raing and boop-boop-a-dooping will be the Elks' Boys Band strutting its material in honor of the boy who comes back in—of all things—"Les Parfums"!

Since, if Hollywood Movietone contracts can be forestalled, he will in all probability perpetuate his popularity in song for many weeks to come, it should be known that Alexander Callam, announced as the new "permanent" master of ceremonies at the Fox Theater, is a Canadian, having been born in Windsor, Ont., where he received his education. He entered "show" business about five years ago when he signed a long-term contract with the Shuberts, subsequently appearing in many of their most successful operettas, including "My Maryland," "The Student Prince," "The Countess Maritza," "The Red Robe" and "Boom Boom."

He is a protege of Mary Garden, famous diva of grand opera, who was responsible for his entering upon a stage career. It was she who arranged for him to study under Teuisan in Chicago.

Mr. Callam is an even 6 feet tall and possesses a 6-foot barytone voice—if you know what I mean. It was this admirable vocal endowment that won him a leading role in Earl Carroll's production of "Fioretta," which recently closed in Boston. Mr. Callam was immediately engaged for what there is left of vaudeville and played Christmas week in the Fox Theater in Philadelphia, to be near his family.

It was there that Dave Idzal, Fox divisional manager for the Philadelphia-Washington territory, heard him.

And here he is.

Oh, by the way, I hope you win the Cadillac!

Streets to Be Closed To Let Cadets Drill

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a recommendation of Traffic Director William H. Harland to rope off streets to permit the drilling of cadets of McKinley High School. The request was made by F. C. Daniel, principal of the school.

Under the order the following streets will be closed to through traffic on Mondays and Thursdays from 3 to 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon: First, between R. and Q; Quincy place, between Lincoln road and Eckington place, and Q, between Lincoln road and Eckington place northeast.

WOMAN BADLY HURT IN FALL FROM HORSE

Mrs. Caroline Finch in Serious Condition After Mishap in Rock Creek Park.

DRAGGED ALONG GROUND

Horseback riding caused a grave injury to another Washington woman yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Carolyn D. Finch, 47 years old, of 707 Roxboro place northwest, was thrown from her mount in Rock Creek Park.

A passing autoist witnessed the accident and took the injured woman to Walter Reed Hospital where she was given emergency treatment by Capt. L. Moore, of the hospital staff. She was later taken to Emergency Hospital. She was reported to be suffering from a fractured skull and possible internal injuries. Her condition was described as extremely serious last night.

Mrs. Finch is the second woman to be seriously injured in a fall from a horse in Washington in the last two days. Mrs. Morris Cafritz, wife of a prominent real estate man and builder, was thrown from her horse last Wednesday. She has remained in a semiconscious condition at Emergency Hospital ever since. The condition of Mrs. Cafritz was said to be unchanged at Emergency Hospital last night.

Mrs. Finch was riding on Military road near Joyce road northwest in Rock Creek Park when her horse shied and threw her. Mrs. Finch is understood to have managed to cling to the horse while it ran for a short distance. She was unconscious when lifted from the ground, and had remained in this condition up to a late hour last night.

Disabled Veterans To Enjoy Program

Post to Sponsor Special Entertainment by "Robin Hood" Cast.

Several members of the cast and ensemble of the "Robin Hood" Company, which will be at Poli's Theater next week, have volunteered to participate in a special program at Walter Reed Hospital Monday afternoon under the auspices of The Washington Post.

Although a number of the disabled veterans have been guests of T. D. Bonneville, manager of Poli's, from time to time, a majority of the patients can not leave the hospital. It is for their benefit particularly that the special performance is to be given.

Among the artists, who will go to the hospital, are Olga Steck, prima donna; William Danforth, comedian; Greek Evans, barytone; Sudsworth Fraser, lyric tenor; Charles E. Galagher, basso; Lorna Doone Jackson, contralto; and Gladys Heyser, soprano.

Golden West Opera Over Air Tonight

Puccini's Famous Work on WRC at 7 P. M. Amos 'n' Andy on WJZ. Borah and Wagner to Speak—News on WOL.

Giacomo Puccini's opera, "The Girl of the Golden West," first produced in New York at the Metropolitan Opera House in December, 1910, will be presented over a nation-wide network of stations as the third of the Puccini opera premieres at 7 o'clock, through Station WRC. It will be Pasquale Amato's privilege of experiencing twice in his life the honor of creating the role of Sheriff Jack Rance for a brand-new audience, since he was the original sheriff in the first production, back in 1910. Of all his famous associates that evening, he alone is active in America today. Caruso, who was the tenor, is dead. Puccini, the composer who was present, is dead. Toscanini, who conducted the performance, is in Italy. Emmy Destin, who sang the soprano role, is in retirement in Czechoslovakia. Only Amato is here.

While the lion's share of the honors of tonight's broadcast go to Amato, he will not lack famous company to help him share them. The soprano role, that of Minnie, mistress of the saloon, will be sung by Frances Alda, fresh from her triumphant farewell performance in "Manon Lescaut" at the Metropolitan. The tenor role, first sung by Caruso, will be given by Mario Chamlee. Gennaro Papi will direct the full operatic orchestra and male chorus. Alois Havrilla will be the operatic narrator.

The story of "The Girl of the Golden West" is based on David Belasco's drama. Puccini saw the play on one of his visits to America and made immediate arrangements with Mr. Belasco to make an opera of it.

Cast in a mining settlement at the foot of the Cloudy Mountains, in California, it reflects the passions and honesty that characterized the gold rush period of the forty-niners.

"Amos 'n' Andy" will not be heard over WRC tonight, due to the opera broadcast, but may be heard from stations WJZ, New York City; WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; WBZA, Boston, Mass.; WHAM, Rochester; KDKA, Pittsburgh; WJR, Detroit; and WCKY, Covington. Later in the evening, at 11:30 o'clock, they may be picked up from station WMAQ, Chicago.

William Butterworth will be the guest speaker in "The New Business World" program, at 8 o'clock. This feature is under the direction of Merle Thorpe.

"Vagrom Ballad," a new composition by George Whitefield Chadwick, dean of American composers, will receive its first interpretation before the microphone when it is presented by Walter Damrosch and his symphony orchestra in the General Electric Hour at 9 o'clock. In addition, Mr. Damrosch has chosen the "Dance of the Apprentices" and "Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger," Wagner; "Moment Musicale," Schubert; and "Daphnis et Chloe," suite, Ravel.

Ludwig Laurier has made the following selections for his Slumber Hour, at 11 o'clock, from WRC.

Overture to "Bohemian Girl," Balfe; selection from "The Connecticut Yankee," Rodgers; "French Canadian Songs," Laurendeau; "Fleurette," Herbert; "Les Patineurs," Waldteufel; "Indian Wedding Feast," Rinkhaus; sextet from "Lucia di Lammermoor," Donizetti; "Estrangement," Hadley; "Frauenherz," Strauss; and "Evening Devotion," Koehler.

Two hours of dance music will be heard during the evening from WRC, the first at 1 o'clock when B. A. Rolfe and his Lucky Strike Orchestra are presented, and the second at midnight, when Rudy Vallee will be on hand with his Connecticut Yankees.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, will be the principal speaker during the National Farm and Home Hour at 1 o'clock, his subject being "Tariff Legislation."

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, will speak on "The Problem of Unemployment" as part of a radio program under the auspices of the National Democratic Club's Forum over Station WMAL at 2:15 o'clock. Carmela Ponselle, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will also be heard in recital during this program.

A program originating in the Mayflower Hotel and transmitted by WMAL will be heard at 7:15 o'clock when the choir members of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament give a short recital for the purpose of acquainting the public with the quality of the talent this organization will present at their Minstrel Show on Friday, January 24. A grand ball will follow the minstrel. Sidney's Hotel Mayflower Trio will assist in the following program:

"I'll Gather a Rose" and "Out of the Dusk to You," Thomas Slattery; "When Twilight Comes" and "Pagan Love Song," Romeo Guaraldi; "There Is a Road That All Lovers Know" and "I'll Close My Eyes to the Rest of the World," Dr. Seba Christie; a group of dialect songs by Matt Lepley and the Dawson brothers, novelty entertainers.

The Uniformed Firemen's Ball from Madison Square Garden will be brought to listeners of WMAL at 8:30 o'clock, followed by the Nit Wit Hour, in which "In Old Kentucky," an old melodrama, will be burlesqued. "Around the Samovar," the Paramount-Publix Hour and the Swanee Syncopators will conclude WMAL's broadcasts.

"Breakfast Brevities" from The Washington Post will be broadcast by Station WOL at 8:15 o'clock this morning. Miss Lillian Capron will discuss "My Red Cross Service" at 10 o'clock, the hour usually given over to Peggy Clarke's household chat. Miss Clarke, who has been ill, expects to be back on the air on Monday morning.

Walter T. Holt and his mandolin and guitar ensemble will be heard in a recital at 6 o'clock. The Silver String Revelers are to be heard at 7:30 o'clock.

Station NAA, Arlington, will broadcast a concert by the Cleveland String Quartet, assisted by Arthur Loesser, pianist, at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

IF an old timer had looked in on the Couzens hearing at the Senate yesterday he might have mistaken the witness on the stand for Eugene Field being charged with having a monopoly on "Winkin', Blinkin' and Nod." It was instead B. J. Grigsby, not from James Whitcomb Riley's "Grigsby's Station, where we was all so happy and so pore," but by his own admission hailing from near Peoria, Ill. He need not have added the "Illinois," for though he had spent ten years in England, his native heath was about as evident as if he had stepped out of the leading role in the "Man From Home."

NOT a poet, nor yet a quaint character, though fond of pumpkin pie and attracting more than passing attention when he went to the White House yesterday to talk with President Hoover, Mr. Grigsby runs the business end of the Grigsby-Grunow Company, manufacturers of Majestic radio sets, of Chicago.

Although this concern has only been manufacturing complete radio sets for a year and a half, Mr. Grigsby told the senators his company during 1929 produced approximately 1,000,000 sets at a retail selling price of $150,000,000. He took quite a fall out of what he called the "radio trust" because of royalties he said he was obliged to pay them, thus preventing his firm from saving his customers at least $15,000,000.

Mr. Grigsby, 45 years old, is today estimated to be worth maybe $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, and his partner, Bill Grunow, 38 years old, who looks after the manufacturing end, possibly as much as $20,000,000, largely acquired in the last two or three years.

The company is now going to manufacture a popular-priced electric refrigerator to keep the factory busy during the season when radio manufacturing is slack.

HERE for the Alfalfa Club dinner tonight, as guests of Thomas P. Littlepage, president of the club, are Ralph and Leslie Atlass, owners of Station WBBM in Chicago.

William S. Paley, of New York, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, scheduled to appear before the Senate committee this morning, will also stay over for the dinner.

An argument advanced by Station WJSV in its hearing before the Federal Radio Commission was that its studios at 339 Pennsylvania Avenue are maintained for the convenience of senators and representatives who speak over the proklan station from time to time. Station WMBC, of Richmond, has charged that WJSV, whose transmitter is located at Mount Vernon Hills, Va., should be credited to the District of Columbia instead of Virginia, alleging that a large portion of its programs originate here.

THE grand opera to be broadcast at 10 o'clock tonight by the Chicago Civic Opera Company is "The Jewess," and next Saturday it will be "Thais." The stations will be, as usual, WJZ, KDKA and others of the Blue network, but not Station

Evidently there has been a rearrangement of the microphones, last Saturday's performance of the second act of the "Barber of Seville" having been heard in Washington better than anything previously brought in.

It was brought out at the Senate hearings this week that while William Hard receives $100 a week for one 15-minute broadcast for the National Broadcasting Co., that David Lawrence receives no compensation for broadcasting his weekly 15-minute talk for the same company.

Although no figure has ever been made public by Columbia as to the present honorarium, it is understood when they took Frederic William Wile away from the N. B. C. a year or so ago, the contract for his 15-minute weekly talk was in the neighborhood of $7,500 a year.

After next week, the Eskimos, so long a Tuesday night feature, will be heard on Friday nights from 9 to 9:30 o'clock.

WALTER DAMROSCH, who will celebrate his sixty-eighth birthday the latter part of this month, can still pound a kettledrum with the best. A few weeks ago Mr. Damrosch happened to be in the studio when the Salon Singers launched into the Brahms "Song of Fate." All during the song the versatile conductor provided the drum-thunder, carefully watching Dilworth as the latter directed the singers.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

The princess line in a nightgown and combination. (Dahray Design.)

Paris, Jan. 17.

WE have our lingerie problems! To tell you the truth, I think it's a problem particular to all women—and interesting as well. But there are ways to have lovely lingerie and to care for it so that it lasts a long time. Here, as in everything else, it pays to buy good materials and have them made or make them yourself, which is more fun.

And something else. It pays endlessly to buy two or three of a kind at once—because all the garments get proportionately less wear in this way than the same amount of garments worn over the same length of time when one is new every month or so—if you see what I mean!

And then another very important lingerie economy idea is that of having different types of lingerie. On the face of it this sounds extravagant—in the long run it is anything but. Because tailored linen broadcloth lingerie, for example, to be worn with sports clothes gets a different type of wear in its contact with the clothes than does crepe georgette fragilely lace-trimmed, which should come into contact only with fragile afternoon and evening gowns.

Exactly the same thing applies to nightgowns, to costume slips, to stockings, and, of course, to shoes. More new ones at one time, no matter how much it hurts (the pocketbook), better materials, more care, and you have a startling economy in the long run!

So-o-o-o-o-o, this week I have designed for you a very smart and certainly practical combination—with just the least hint of a princess line! And a nightgown with more than a hint of the princess line—both ever so easy to make, both terribly smart and new, both together requiring just two and three-quarter yards of material!

If you care to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet, which will tell you exactly how you can make these two pieces of lingerie all by yourself, you just may, alors!

Little Tots' Corner.

Some one writes that we have been neglecting Petite Adorable here lately. If we have been neglecting her here in the "column," we certainly haven't been neglecting her anywhere else! What with her home here at this odd time of year, getting official permission for her to break into school after such an absence and what-not, you can imagine how busy we've been!

Anyway, she has a lot of new spring clothes now in the making, and I'll start telling you about them so you can plan the same things for your Petite Adorable.

• • • •

Tomorrow is the day when you should look for the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Washington Post every Sunday.

MODERATE DAY SEES STOCK PRICE SLUMP

FOREIGN SHARES EASE

New York, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Bear traders kept up their barrage on the stock market today, and succeeded in driving the entire list moderately lower, but uncovered few vulnerable spots. They were unable to bring any considerable volume of stock onto the market, and trading slackened moderately, the day's turnover totaling 2,679,470 shares, compared to 3,043,620 yesterday.

The market remains almost entirely professional, although trading has picked up a little during the past three sessions. Commission houses report that the volume of public participation is negligible, consisting largely of trickles of odd lot buying. The recent extreme dullness caused some observers to conclude that the market was oversold, but it appears that bears, after adhering for a time to the Wall street maxim, "never sell a dull market," were finally encouraged by the lack of enterprise shown by speculators for the rise.

Bearish operations of the past two days have depressed the price index of 90 leading stocks nearly 3 points, while the gradual rise of the three preceding sessions resulted in a net gain of only about 1½ points. These narrow fluctuations primarily reflect lack of convincing industrial news, rather than any definite outside influences. Operators for the advance still appear to be marking time pending the appearance of such definite signs of business acceleration as will provide the market with some impetus.

Weather Hinders Business.

Today's business news was meager and characteristically unconvincing. The weekly reviews reported a gradual stepping up of industrial activity, but no more than is in keeping with the normal January trend, and adverse influences on retail trade by extreme weather conditions. The Department of Justice's denial of the petition to modify the packers' consent decree was of purely negative influence, as the packing stocks have been thoroughly deflated for some time.

Credit continued plentiful, call money renewing at 4½ per cent and again dropping to 4, which was encouraging, as today's rates hold over the week-end. The rate held at 4½ all day last Friday. Time money was a shade easier.

Heavy selling of the radio, motor and copper shares appeared during the morning, but encountering considerable resistance in most of these shares speculators for the fall curtailed operations until the last half hour, when a drive against the utility and chemical shares was launched which drove several traders long of these stocks to take profits on their recent upturn. Some observers regarded this as a maneuver to permit covering in other sections of the market.

Pronounced weak spots were Crosley Radio and Grigsby Grunow. Both were depressed about 4 points, but rallied somewhat before the close. The former touched a new low at 10¼, compared to last year's high of 125. Radio Corporation was sent down a couple of points, but closed off only ¾.

General Electric Loses.

Such shares as Air Reduction, American Can, American & Foreign Power, American Water Works, Andes Copper, Byers, Columbian Carbon, Erie, General Electric, Granby, International Telephone, J. I. Case, Johns-Manville, North American, Pan-American, Simmons, Standard Gas, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Westinghouse Electric lost 2 to 5 points. Peoples Gas, normally a wide mover, dropped 19 then rebounded 9. Midland Steel preferred and Michigan Steel, lately buoyant features, dropped about 8 points each.

U. S. Steel, which recently offered its stock to employes at 169, touched 168¾, but closed at 169, off 1½. General Motors received powerful support and closed fractionally higher. The tobacco shares were strong in response to indications of ending the last cigarette price-cutting war. American Tobacco closed 3 points higher.

In the commodities, wheat futures were erratic, losing about 2 cents, then regaining their losses on reports of Farm Board buying and better foreign demand. Cotton sagged early in the day but rallied in sympathy with wheat and better prices at Liverpool, and closed slightly higher. Corn was firm in response to unfavorable weather reports.

Leading foreign exchanges eased further, sterling cables reaching a new low for the month at $4.86 11-16.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Emphatic disclaimers that the Canadian wheat growers pool has become weak-kneed on wheat market prospects led to sharp rallies today in wheat values here.

Earlier the Chicago wheat market, influenced by reports of flattening out of European demand for breadstuffs and that Canadian banks were forcing customers to sell out wheat, had plunged downward to the lowest point reached since November 12 last, with rye quotations today showing a temporary break of 5c a bushel. Toward the end of the day, however, assertions came from the Canadian growers pool that world demand for wheat is improving, and that the pool will be able to dispose of its wheat to advantage.

Under such circumstances hurried selling of wheat and other grain in Chicago was replaced by sudden scarcity of offerings, and prices made a quick recovery with previous speculative sellers becoming urgent buyers. Wheat closed irregular at ¼c net decline to ¾c advance. Rye finished 1½c to 2¼c off, corn ½c to 1c up, oats unchanged to ¼c higher and provisions showing 2c to 30c gain.

Late upturns in Chicago wheat prices today were accelerated by authoritative statements that the Canadian wheat growers' pool has not been and is not now active in the liquidating sales which have of late been witnessed at Winnipeg. On the contrary, the Canadian pool was stated to be in a very sound position, and without change in any respect as to the pool's view of unquestionably sound world conditions regarding wheat. In addition to the stimulating effect of late Canadian advices today the wheat market here proved responsive also to word from official sources at Washington that the outlook for cash wheat during January and February is still for some improvement in prices.

Unfavorable weather for corn movement, together with complaints of extensive damage to seed corn and to the quality of corn in cribs, did much to give independent strength to the corn market, owing to early weakness of wheat, however. March and July corn today sold early at a new low price record for the season. Oats were governed by the action of wheat and corn.

Provisions advanced, reflecting an upturn in the value of hogs.

BONDS REMAIN FIRM IN SLUGGISH MARKET

Foreign Exchanges Retain Their Advance, but Sales Ease.

SUGAR SHARES INCREASE

New York, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Activity in bonds diminished with the approach of the week-end today. Prices, however, held up well, giving the list a firm appearance despite the counterattractions available in the form of the recent new offerings.

Time loans were made at about the quotations of Thursday, namely 4½ and 4¾ per cent, but in money market circles it was reported that a tendency toward a flat 4½ per cent rate was evident. Although funds were a little more active, an appreciable quickening is not expected until the maturity of loans made at the higher rates prevailing several months ago.

Foreign obligations retained most of yesterday's advance, but inquiry was slower. French governments, which have liberal sinking fund provisions, were again very active and virtually unchanged. Chile 6s and Argentine 6s eased, but there was fair buying in Irish Free State 5s, Republic of Poland 7s, Rome 6½s, Norway 5½s and Belgium 6s.

U. S. Shares Again Sag.

Libertys and Treasurys failed to shake off their lethargy and sagged on small sales after a mild rally in the early dealings.

Absence of demand brought out a mixture of small advances and declines in the rails. Atchison general 4s, Pennsylvania gold 5s, New York Central 3½s and a few other prime transportation issues shaded lower, but Canadian National 4½s, Michigan Central 3½s, Nickel Plate 5½s Pennsylvania 4s and Union Pacific first 4s showed net gains averaging about half a point.

Foreign Sugars responded to favorable developments affecting the trade, notably the Senate's decision to retain the current duty on the staple. East Cuba 7½s rose 3¼, Manati 7½ rallied 2½ and Vertientes 7s gained 2 points.

Chesapeake & Ohio at 94.

American Telephone debenture 5s of 1965, when issued, moved actively, advancing to 100⅝ and then working back to yesterday's close of 100⅜. The new Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s ruled at 94, the offering figure.

Utilities were dull. Western Union Gold 5s rose ⅛ on a fair turnover. Consolidated Gas of New York 5½s, Brooklyn-Manhattan 5s, a New York Traction and Bell Telephone 5s also showed to advantage, rising half a point each. American Telephone 5½s and Collateral 5s sagged.

The heavy stock market carried the share privilege bonds downward. International Telephone 4½s made an extreme decline of 4¾, recovering one point of that loss. American Telephone 4½s dropped 1¾ net, New Haven 6s and Southern Pacific 4½s, with warrants lost 1 and Atchison 4½s yielded ½.

CENTRAL ROUTS TECH FIVE, ADDING TO SERIES LEAD

SMALL TOWNS SHAME CITY SLICKERS

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—One of the reasons why Maj. Philip B. Fleming, the graduate manager of athletics at West Point, wished to transfer the annual Notre Dame-Army football game to some other city is that theater owners of New York always raise their rates of admission on the evening after this big game. As this is the cadets' only big Saturday night in town all season, the increase in the box office prices is deemed to be a pointed discrimination against the uniform. Of course, there is also the matter of the little children who yell discouraging remarks at the corps of cadets as the Gray column swings down the road from the High-Bridge Railroad Station on the Harlem River to the Yankee Stadium or Polo Grounds.

It has been semi-officially stated that these children do not speak for the city administration, but that is as it may be. The mayor, Mr. Walker, has a couple of nephews at Notre Dame and these apparently irresponsible cries may be part of a Tammany, wet, nullificationist plot to undermine the morale of the Army and capture Washington, but regarding the avarice of the theater owners or show promoters, or whoever they are who raise the prices of theater tickets on Notre Dame-Army night, I have some ideas which may or may not be worth the white paper on which to print them.

Innkeepers Are Larcenious.

These ideas have been derived from considerable experience in such places as Louisville at Derby time; in New Haven, Conn., on Yale-Harvard and Yale-Princeton days; in New London on boat race days; in Miami in winter and in New Orleans at Mardi Gras time. It would be quibbling to say that the innkeepers of New Haven, for instance, are less larcenous than these at New London, because in all these cities on these occasions the hotel keepers practice all the larceny that they can get away with.

In judging such matters one does not ask how much the boys got away with, but only whether they got away with all they could, and I do not believe any hotel man in any of the cities mentioned ever could be accused of not bearing down on the victims on a big occasion. Some of these crowds are less liberal than others, or have convenient alternatives when the hotel keeper temporarily raises the rate for a moldy room on an air shaft from the normal rate of $1.50 a day asked, 75 cents bid, to $18 a day. I realize that, as one who has always traveled to these places on expense account, I should not be sensitive. One might say that the larceny did not affect me and inquire: "What are you beefing about?"

Pains Him to Be Overtaxed.

But your correspondent is somewhat McTavish about these matters and it pains him acutely to give up, even when the money is not his own, especially in New Haven, Conn., where the hotels give the least for the most money. Miami is on the ocean, which is rather attractive, but New Haven's scenery consists largely of dumps. It is in these smaller cities that the customers on a big occasion take the severest punishment, and if Maj. Fleming should take the corps of cadets to New Haven for the Notre Dame game the boys would be treated very kindly, no doubt, but the pressure on the West Point and Notre Dame alumni, who would be on their own resources, would be terrific. I believe that, as between paying a dollar or two more for theater tickets in New York and submitting to the unrestrained larceny of the cab drivers and hotel men in New Haven, the Army and Notre Dame would save considerable money by tolerating the mild larceny of the New York theatrical men.

New Players, Speed Added By Braves

Status of Maranville in Doubt With McKechnie at Head.

New Pilot Released Veteran From Two Other Clubs.

This is another of a series dealing with 1930 major league baseball prospects.

By WILLIAM R. KING.

BOSTON, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Plans for the 1930 tribe of Boston Braves, according to President Emil E. Fuchs, call for several new faces and much more speed in every position. The outstanding new face will be that of Bill McKechnie, who has accepted the managership that Johnny Evers and "Rabbit" Maranville rejected last season.

Followers of the last-place National League club, however, appear much less interested in what the Braves are going to do in 1930 than in what McKechnie is going to do about Maranville.

This coming season will mark the third time in six years that "Rabbit" has crossed McKechnie's path. On the two previous occasions while Bill was piloting the Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals, he promptly traded the carefree shortstop, who was then one of the play boys of the National League.

Maranville Starred Last Season.

Maranville has settled down during the last couple of years and last season he was the league's second best fielding shortstop and batted exceptionally well.

So far McKechnie has not made any mention of Maranville and it can be assumed that he is willing to forget the past, for the "Rabbit" is the only seasoned shortstop on the Braves' infield squad.

Johnny Neun, who had a great year with Detroit in 1927, appears slated for George Sisler's first base job, Sisler to be used as a coach and pinch hitter. Neun started with the Toledo Club last season and finished with Baltimore. Harry Nolan, a Beaumont, Tex., schoolboy, is also another first-base prospect.

Freddy Maguire should not have much trouble keeping the second baseman's berth away from Bob James, who was with the club last season.

Though Lester Bell has been traded to the Chicago Cubs, McKechnie has a surplus of third basemen. Three youngsters, Gene Robertson, Russell Rollings, late of Hollywood, and Henry Peploski, who saw some service late last season, will fight for that post.

Berger to Be in Outfield.

Lance Richbourg, Jimmy Welsh and Walter Berger, who hit well over .300 for Los Angeles last season and came to the Braves in the Bell deal, will probably make up the regular outfield with Earl Clark, Joe Bratcher, late of the Denver club; Jim Dunlap and Ralph Boyle, acting as replacements.

Nothing much has been done to strengthen the pitching staff and it now appears that Harry Seibold, Bruce Cunningham, Percy Jones, Johnny Cooney and Ed Brandt will be forced to carry on as they did last season.

The catching department is also unchanged, consisting only of Al Spohrer and Bill Cronin. The veteran Hank Gowdy is called a catcher by the club roster, but he intends to spend most of next season grooming the tribal pitchers.

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 17.—The Episcopal High School and Alexandria High School Basket Ball Teams will play their "homecoming" game of the 1930 season in Armory Hall Tuesday night, it was stated today by Director Reynolds, of the Alexandria High tossers. The Knight Store Team had a game scheduled for Armory Hall that night, but they have stepped aside to make way for the high school.

Two teams of girls from the high school, known as Teams A and B, are in a ticket-selling contest for this game, to raise money to defray expenses of the present campaign. The members of the local team will have new uniforms, purchased from this fund.

Wilson Sinclair was elected captain of the team at a meeting of the players held yesterday afternoon. He is one of the leaders of the sport and is playing a great game. He is a senior this year.

Saturday night the local high school team will meet the Knight Store in the first of a two-game series. The game will be played in Armory Hall, starting at 8:15 o'clock, and the high school boys hope to spring a surprise on their more experienced rivals.

Coach Reynolds stated today that the basket ball season would end on March 7 for his team, provided no games are scheduled in the State championship competition.

G.W. QUINTET WINNER IN OVERTIME

Special to The Washington Post.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 17.—George Washington University escaped defeat for the second successive night in another exciting basket-ball game tonight, the Colonials from the National Capital being forced to travel an extra period before subduing a fighting Medical College of Virginia Quint, 29 to 25.

The master of their opponents in the opening half, but given an equal battle in the closing session, the Colonials found themselves deadlocked at 23-all as the proverbial pistol popped at the end of the game. It was an uphill struggle, this one waged by the Medicos in the second half; but they fought courageously, climbing step by step from the very minute they returned after intermission George Washington led at the turn, 15 to 6. Then Oliver, the tall center of the Richmonders, got into action, and exciting movements followed.

Tie Game With 30 Seconds to Go.

With 30 seconds to play, the Colonials led, 23 to 21; then Lee Todd, the former William and Mary star, came dashing up the floor and pocketed the field goal that swung the locals into even terms.

In the extra period the Medicos, eager for victory, guarded zealously, and in their overanxiety to get the ball, fouled frequently, whereupon young Fine scored two free throws and followed with a nifty shot from the side to clinch the game, but Jeweller and Ginberg rendered victory more complete by ringing up foul goals. Richmond's contribution in this session was a long shot by Oliver.

It was a hard-fought game, with Fine and Oliver sharing scoring honors with 13 points apiece. Todd's defensive work was of a high order. Jeweller and Harris were in the thick of the fight for the visitors.

Mills Stickler For Rockne's System

New Coach Says G.W. Will Stand or Fall on Famous Style.

Expects Much From Assistants; Spring Drills Planned.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY'S football destinies, in particular, and athletic ambitions in general, will be strictly dependent for the next three years upon the success of Knute Rockne's famous Notre Dame system, transplanted here under the direction and guidance of Tom Mills, new athletic director at the Hilltop and until recently a prominent part of the successful South Bend athletic board of strategy.

Lou Little's successor spent a busy day yesterday, following his arrival here to look over the athletic situation at Georgetown, conferring with officials at the Hilltop, receiving newspapermen who came to interview him and seeking a home, which he and his family hope to occupy after February 1.

Assembling the odds and ends of information gleaned from persons closely associated with athletics at Georgetown and from personal observations, the new athletic director intimated last night that he had a fair vision of the task which confronts him when he assumes command of the situation after February 1.

Intends to Back System.

It is his personal opinion that the Rockne football system is the most successful and it is his determination to either stand or fall in his endeavors at Georgetown on that system.

"Many of Rockne's pupils have failed in their coaching aspirations because they failed to stick strictly to the letter of that plan of conducting athletic activities," Mills said. "They start right but find the task of introducing the new style to their field too great and gradually deviate from the strict Notre Dame plan. I intend to adhere absolutely to the Notre Dame plan in football and as near to that program in all other branches of sports as the circumstances will permit."

Mills paid high tribute to the athletic and personnel qualities of the two assistants he has selected to aid him at Georgetown—Tim Moynihan and John Colrick. Although Colrick graduates at the end of this month and Moynihan receives his degree in June, both men are mature leaders and more capable of taking over coaching duties than many men of much more experience, he declared.

Lengthy Spring Practice Planned.

Indicating that he expects a lot of hard work in introducing the Notre Dame style of football play at Georgetown, Mills said that he and Colrick will begin a lengthy spring practice season as soon as the weather will permit.

A baseball coach will probably be named within the next few days, Mills stated. Colrick, who starred as a first baseman at Notre Dame, would make a very capable baseball coach, Mills said, but indicated that he preferred to have him assist with spring football training.

All coaching will be intrusted to graduates of Notre Dame, Mills said. He hopes to secure one or more additional football coaches to take charge of the freshmen squad next fall. By teaching the freshmen the Notre Dame system from the start, Mills believes he will be relieved of much teaching of fundamentals in the future.

Mills plans to remain here until Monday before returning to South Bend to move his family here.

Western Wins By 29-28 Over Business

Cross Leads Attack as Central Takes 3d Straight, 45-25.

Chatten's Toss in Last Seconds Saves Western From Defeat.

By WILLIAM F. DISMER, Jr.

BY thoroughly routing the Tech basket ball team, 45 to 25, in the McKinley High Gymnasium, Central High's clever five took undisputed possession of first place in the Inter-high Court League yesterday with a record of three straight wins in as many starts. The Western Team, by virtue of a last-minute 29 to 28 victory over Business, assumed the runner-up position while virtually eliminating the latter from further consideration for the title.

Rendering the famed Tech zone defense practically useless by its style of play, the Central team took a lead shortly after the beginning of the game and was never headed, increasing its margin as the game grew older. By stationing two players at each corner of the court under the Tech basket, and one in the middle, the Blue and White five exhibited a formation which was able to ring up point after point from these side angles.

With Capt. Cross, Lampson and Parkins all showing the benefits of constant practice at netting the ball from the side court, the Blue and White Team accumulated its total without being forced to attempt to sift through Tech's zone. Each of the trio showed an uncanny eye at "potting" the ball from any angle, with Cross leading his mates with seven field goals.

Tech Changes Its Style Late in Game.

Late in the game, the Tech players abandoned their zone and played man for man, but it was too late. Once in the lead, Central's margin completely demoralized the Maroon and Gray lads and with the Tech players out of their accustomed position, the Mount Pleasant team increased its total by registering from any position on the floor.

The Tech Team was hindered somewhat by the absence of Dick Lassisse, guard, who was kept on the bench with an infected toe.

Although the Manual Trainers got off to a 3-to-0 lead on Russell's snowbird and Wilson's foul, Cross sent his team ahead by making good on two free shots after being fouled in the act of making his team's first double-decker. Capt. MacCartee, however, tied the score for Tech with another charity toss, but after Lampson's single-pointer had sent Central ahead in the next moment, the Tech threat was ended. Not once thereafter was Tech on even terms with its rival.

Half of Tech's points in the first half were recorded from the 15-foot line and at intermission Central was boasting a 19-to-12 lead. With the same display of speed which they flashed throughout the first 20 minutes, the Blue and White lads went on to turn the game into a complete rout after the resumption of play.

Central Starts Final Period With Big Lead.

Outscoring their foes, 16-6, in the third quarter, Central was ahead, 35-18, at the beginning of the final pe-

North Carolina Five Downs Va. Poly, 31-17

Special to The Washington Post.

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 17.—North Carolina State College uncorked a flashy exhibition of floor work and accurate shooting to down the Virginia Polytechnic Institute basketers in the opening conference game here tonight, 31 to 17. The Gobblers fought the dixie champions doggedly in the first half but withered before State's attack in the final period.

Capt. Looney and Moore fought their way through to score at short-range midway the first half to give V. P. I. the lead, 8 to 6, but Gammon evened the count a moment later. Looney scored from the foul line to send his team ahead for the second time, but Gammon, lanky Carolina center, again made good from the floor to take the lead and State was never again threatened.

Revamped Gonzaga Five Downs Devitt

Employing a revamped line-up last night the Gonzaga Basketers defeated Devitt, 28 to 18, in the Gonzaga Gymnasium. In the preliminary attraction, the Aloysius Girls triumphed over the Knight Buddies, of Alexandria, 20 to 16.

Coach Mitchell, of Gonzaga, started a new line-up at the start, comprised of Nolan, McVean, Pyne, Hester and Brew. This quintet ran up a 10 to 2 lead before being relieved. The Purple led at intermission, 12 to 2, and coasted to victory despite the late spurt of the Devitt tossers.

MARYLAND U. WINS OVER HOPKINS

Berger and Chalmers Lead in Old Liners' 41-24 Victory.

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY'S high-powered basket ball team easily defeated its ancient foe, Johns Hopkins, by a score of 41 to 24, last night on the College Park floor. It was the fourth victory in five starts for the Old Line quintet.

Using a new starting lineup, Maryland took the lead in the opening minute and stayed there the remainder of the 40 minutes. The closest the Blue Jays approached was at an early stage when they trailed 3 to 5. Coach Burton Shipley started a team composed of Evans and Ronkin, forwards; Berger, center, and Gaylor and Heagy, guards. Julie Radice, veteran guard, got into the game as a forward, but did not take part in the scoring.

Shorty Chalmers led the Old Line offense with 11 points and was pressed for the honors by Berger, who accumulated a total of 9. Johns Hopkins was led by a forward, Stude, who rang up 11 points. The star Blue Jay center, Charlie DeBuskey, did not perform.

Ruth, Paired With Al Smith, Develops Cramps and Loses

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—There is no telling how badly Al Smith and Babe Ruth would have beat their opponents in an 18-hole golf match today if the Babe had not developed cramps.

As it was, Bob Shawkey, new manager of the New York Yankees, and Billy Klem, major league umpire, breezed in with an 8 and 7 win.

Teamed with Ruth, the former New York governor oozed confidence at the park: "If you can hit a golf ball like a baseball, we're all set," he told the Babe.

To prove his confidence, Al stepped up to the tee and smacked the ball straight down the fairway, soon after, with a 20-foot putt that gave him a par four and put the Babe-Al combination one up.

It was just as well, for it was the only time during the match that Babe and Al were up.

A cold drink around, and a hot sun bearing down, had its effect on the stomach that holds the major league record by its capacity for hot dogs and pop.

Babe complained of the cramps, but after a short rest, he manfully resumed play.

There is little more to tell, except that the Babe's medal score soared to 95, and his partner, affected, no doubt, by Ruth's collapse, turned in 119. Shawkey had 91 and Klem 95.

No amount of coaxing by newspaper men in the gallery could induce Ruth to comment on his new salary contract.

"They've got to come to see me," he said. "I set the price, and there's no response to my suggestion." The suggestion being $80,000 on a three-year contract. It was a big day for Al. He started it off by driving a fire truck from the Coral Gables department station to a call box, where he smilingly doffed his brown derby to the photographers.

"Fire fighting isn't what it used to be when they used horses," he said.

WHICHONE, BOOJUM DOUBTFUL DERBY STARTERS

Whitney Turf Stars Nurse Injuries

Hopes to Have Pair Ready for Meets in New York.

Healey, New Trainer, Notes Injuries to Knees and Legs.

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Whichone, winner of the Futurity, the Saratoga Special and the Champagne Stakes, and the outstanding 2-year-old of last season, and Boojum, his stable mate, which beat him in the Hopeful Stakes in world-record time at Saratoga last August, are doubtful racing propositions for the coming season on the word of Tom Healey, who recently took over the stable of Harry Payne Whitney.

Healey, who is here for a short holiday before taking over his new duties at the Whitney farm at Red Bank, said that when he looked over the stock just before he left he found that Whichone's knees were in bad condition and that Boojum was suffering from a bowed tendon in the left fore leg.

Naturally this will interfere to a considerable extent with the training of both colts for their engagements in such 3-year-old stakes as the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

Maybe Ready for New York Meets.

Although Healey said that, with proper attention, much could be done with both Whichone and Boojum before the New York tracks open, he said he hoped he would be able to get both to the races this season.

He pointed out that plenty of horses with enlarged knees and bowed tendons have won good races, but that they always were doubtful racing propositions at best.

Although none of the older horses impressed him on his tour of inspection, Healey said that he had some high class 2-year-olds in the barn.

Whichone Retired Early in 1929.

The juveniles are 23 in number. It will be recalled that Whichone was retired for the season immediately after the running of the Futurity, though Boojum was kept in training for a while with the expectation of running him in the Pimlico Futurity.

Whichone was the leading money winner last season, winding up with more than $150,000 to his credit. It will be recalled that Boojum bolted to the rail when far in front of his field in the Futurity, which, in the light of subsequent events, was an indication of his unsoundness.

CENTRAL AND WESTERN VICTORS

Business Bows, 29-28; Tech Trounced by 45-25 Score.

riod, with Cross and Lampson taking an equal hand in the point making.

With the game safely tucked away, Coach Coggins inserted an entire second team for Central and had the satisfaction of seeing them maintain the margin. Morgan and Korman each came through with goals which sent Central's total scoring to 45.

The Western victory in the first game was made possible by the last-minute performance of Paul Chatlen, who previously had been dubbed the "goat" of the game by muffing an easy chance. Early in the game Chatlen had been stationed under the Business basket with no Stenog player nearer than 10 yards of him, but, with all the time in the world, failed to send the ball through the loop.

However, with his team trailing by 1 point and only forty seconds to play, Chatlen proved the hero. After a toss-up between Loftus and Freeman, the latter managed to bat the ball to Jimmy Thompson, who, unfortunately, was in no position to shoot. Thompson immediately snaped the ball back to Freeman, who, seeing Chatlen free, passed him the oval. Without hesitation Chatlen then gave the ball a deft flip, which sent it spinning through the cords to give his team the victory.

Lead Shifts Frequently in Second Half.

During a mix-up following the ensuing tap-off, the final gun barked, ending the game.

To attain the win, the Western Quintet had fought an uphill battle all the way, overcoming a 11-3 lead held by the Stenogs after the first ten minutes of play to approach within two points of their foes at half time, which ended, 13-11 in Business' favor. From then on, the baskets were scored at intervals, with first one team and then the other holding the upper hand. During the third quarter, the score was tied no less than three times and as the final ten minutes of play started, Western was boasting a 22-18 lead.

With little Bobby Lucas showing the way, however, Business crept to within one point of Western, at 25-24, and a minute later Chase took a pass sent from the other end of the floor by Pete Loftus to make the score 26-25 with Business on the long end. Two more baskets, one by each team, provided the situation for Chatlen's aforementioned game-winning goal.

N. C. RINGMEN AT W. & L. TONIGHT

Six of 7 to Get Call Were Regulars on 1929 Squad.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Jan. 17.—The University of North Carolina boxers probably will rely on veterans when they begin their 1930 campaign against Washington and Lee at Lexington Saturday night in quest of a third consecutive Southern title.

A last light workout today capped a hard program of drills that dates back to well before Christmas. Coach Crayton Rowe pronounced his squad in good shape today, although Davis and Vaughan reported back in college only at the first of the year and didn't get the benefit of the pre-Christmas training.

Six of the seven men who probably will get the call to scrap the General mitmen were regulars last year and all placed well in the conference meet, with Capt. Archie Allen, 145-pounder, winning an individual title in his weight.

The others are Evan Vaughan, 115-pounder; Harry Sheffield, 125-pounder; Noah Goodridge, 135 pounds; Obie Davis, 160 pounds, and John Warren, light heavy.

Koenig Shows Promise As Heavy.

Bill Koenig, grid star and most promising candidate to get the heavyweight call, probably will be the only new man to box for the Tarheels. Koenig boxed as a freshman in 1927, and has been giving great promise in the varsity workouts this year. He stands 6 feet 2, and carries 190 pounds.

Cohen, 125-pounder; Farris, 145-pounder, and Rosenfeld, 160-pounder, have all been showing considerable promise. Any of the number might face the issue with one of the lettermen at a later date, but it looks just now, with Washington and Lee looming as one of the Tarheels' strongest opponents, that Coach Rowe will rely on his veterans for the opening meet.

Woodberry Five Bows To McGuires, 17 to 15

Special to The Washington Post.

Woodberry Forest, Va., Jan. 17.—A field goal by Allison in the closing moments of play enabled the McGuires School, of Richmond, to break a deadlock and send the Woodberry Forest Quintet to its initial defeat of the season, 17 to 15, here this afternoon. The game was a nip and tuck affair throughout. The half time showed a 13 to 10 count in the local's favor. One free throw apiece was all either team could gather in during the third period, due largely to air-tight guarding and somewhat slow forming of offenses. Again in the final frame, the Orange Team's scoring activities were confined to but a single successful free throw, while, in the meantime, McGuires rang up two field goals, thereby gaining the close verdict. Miner, of Woodberry, led the scoring with seven points with Downey, of the Richmond Team, but a point behind for second honors.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 17.—Virginia's first year swimming team made its season's debut this afternoon, defeating the Natators from Staunton Military Academy, 42 to 18. Freshman entries won first place in six of the seven events. Huss (Staunton), captured the fancy diving event, with Winston (Virginia), second and Pangle (Virginia), third. Andrews (Virginia), was high point man, capturing first place in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes. His teammate, Sayer, was second in both races.

Glenn (Virginia), won the backstroke in 37 seconds, with Huss (Staunton), second, and Richards (Virginia), third. Daniels (Virginia) annexed first place in the breast stroke, while second and third places went to Staunton entries. Time, 38 seconds.

The 50-yard dash was captured by Echard (Virginia), in 27 seconds. Echard, Pangle, Sayer and Andrews, of Virginia, composed the winning relay team.

West Va. Five Plays. Penn State Tonight

Special to The Washington Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 17.—For the first time since 1921 the Mountaineers of West Virginia University and the Nittany Lions of Penn State College will match skill in basket ball when the fives of these two rival institutions hook up here tomorrow evening. The Lions and the Mountaineers have had four previous court skirmishes and three of them were won by the Pennsylvanians.

Thus far this year West Virginia has been victorious in three of its four court starts, while Penn State broke even in its four games. Against a common rival, the Lions and the Mountaineers appear to be fairly evenly matched, for Penn State tripped Carnegie Tech, 27 to 21, and West Virginia defeated the Plaid, 30 to 29. In the preliminary, the University Freshman Team also winner in three of four starts, will play the Fairmount Collegians, West Virginia independent champions.

Navy Boxers Open 1930 Season Tonight

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17.—Boxers of Dartmouth College, invading the Southern sector for their debut in the roped arena, will stack up against the Annapolis Midshipmen tomorrow night to open the intercollegiate season here. The Hanoverians made their formal bow tonight, meeting Western Maryland at Westminster.

The mit bouts will be the outstanding feature of week-end athletic activities at the Naval Academy, other events carded for the afternoon being basket ball with Catholic University of Washington, while the Navy Plebes will engage Baltimore City College and there will be a small-bore rifle match with Penn State. Another event to make the program event more interesting will be basketball between St. John's College and Gallaudet to be staged in the Johnnies' Gymnasium at night.

Entries for the meet are: 115 pounds—Cook (Navy) against Lantrotios; 125 pounds, Long (Navy) against Weinseimer; 135 pounds, Demetropolis, against Destefano; 145 pounds, Hallack (Navy) against Capt. Alton; 160 pounds, Andrews (Navy) against Boragner; 175 pounds, Capt. Moret (Navy) against Wilkin; Swan or Chapple (Navy) against Ryan.

Charlie Shortt, of Baltimore, will be referee, and Grazier, Penn State, and Richie, Yale, judges.

MIDDIE CREW COACH ON THE JOB

Glendon, Sr., Ready to Start Work; Hard Season Ahead.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 17.—Impetus to plans for the rowing season at the Naval Academy was given with the arrival of Richard A. ("Old Dick") Glendon, veteran member, after a lapse of a year. Dick received his usual warm greeting from his pupils, athletic officials at the academy and a large circle of friends in the city.

The veteran coach looked over some of his pupils today. The call for candidates has already gone forth and within a few days busy scenes will be enacted in the gymnasium tank, where the sweepsters will be put to work on the rowing machines. Some few of the last year's men are participating in winter indoor sports, but Glendon will have a sufficient number to make progress and, with the arrival of open weather, the crews will take to the river. Candidates for the plebe or freshmen eight have been on the water during the mild weather that has prevailed for the last several days, their work being directed by Duck Walsh, star oarsman when a midshipman, who is now out of the service.

Hard Campaign Planned For Oarsmen.

The middie bladesmen will have a pretty stiff campaign this year, the schedule calling for dual, triangular and four-cornered brushes. Races with Massachusetts Tech, Pennsylvania, Syracuse and Columbia are listed, and there is chance that a brush with Princeton may be arranged. In addition, crews will be entered in the American Henley and the intercollegiate classic at Poukhkeepsie.

Definite dates are: April 19, triangular race with Columbia and Massachusetts Tech as other participants; May 10, Syracuse; May 17, four-cornered regatta with Harvard, Massachusetts Tech and Pennsylvania as the other entries, to be rowed on the Charles River. This latter is expected to be the biggest college event of the aquatic season, aside from the Henley and Poughkeepsie regattas.

Little General Five Defeats Benedictine

Lexington, Va., Jan. 17.—Washington and Lee freshmen opened their basket ball campaign here today with a victory over Benedictine High, of Richmond, 36 to 23. The Little Generals showed superiority over their opponents both in team work and scoring. Scoring honors went to Violett and Jarrett, of the winners, with 9 and 8 points, respectively, and to Amory, who also scored 8 points.

CONVENTION IS IN MAY

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Gov. John S. Fisher today signed requisition papers for Mrs. Irene Schroeder, blonde bandit, and W. Glenn Dague, who are being held at Phoenix, Ariz., and are sought by Pennsylvania State police for the slaying of Brady Paul, State Highway patrolman. The requisition order also names Tom Crawford, second alleged companion of Mrs. Schroeder at the time of the fatal shooting, who has not been located.

The trio is charged with murder and manslaughter. County Detective Lee, Ernest Moore, a highway patrolman, who witnessed the shooting of Corporal Paul, who was wounded himself, expects to start for Phoenix tonight by train.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Mrs. Irene Schroeder and W. Glenn Dague, accused of slaying a Pennsylvania State highway patrolman, were brought together today for the first time since their capture near here last Tuesday, but they refused to discuss their alleged crimes.

When they saw each other in the office of Sheriff Charles Wright they embraced. Asked about their relationship, the woman replied: "Why should we worry about that when we have each other?"

Previously she has contended that Dague is her husband.

She said today that she was not Irene Schroeder, but that her name was Mildred Winthrop. Last night, after she had been called to a telephone to talk with her son, Donnie Schroeder, who is in Newcastle, Pa., she dropped the receiver and said she did not know who was speaking to her and that she had no son.

Officers said they had been able to gain little information from the pair. They were captured with Vernon Ackerman, alias Joe F. Wells, suspected bank robber, in the mountains near Laveen, Ariz., after a two-day hunt and a gun fight in which two officers were wounded and the woman hurt. They surrendered only after a posse surrounded them on a mountainside.

The woman and Dague are wanted in Newcastle for killing Corpl. Brady Paul last December. Arizona authorities believe Dague and Ackerman were implicated in a bank robbery in Coleman, Tex., in which one robber was slain.

Liggett Sentenced For Manslaughter

Nashville Grain Dealer Is Given Up to Five Years at Third Trial.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 17 (A.P.). Walter L. Liggett, Nashville grain dealer, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter and his punishment fixed at not more than five years in the penitentiary today by the jury which heard his third trial for the murder of Turney Cunningham, Nashville hotel man.

Liggett received the jury's verdict without comment. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Liggett, and an uncle, W. H. Williams, signed a $7,500 bond, securing his release. Defense attorneys have ten days in which to file a new trial motion.

Under the sentence, Liggett would be eligible to parole at the end of a year and nine months' imprisonment.

Cunningham was killed October 29, 1928, in an alley back of his home. The State contended that Liggett, paying a lover's call to Mrs. Era Cunningham, was surprised by her husband, and that Liggett shot the husband to death. Liggett claimed Cunningham shot first and pleaded self-defense.

Two previous trials at Nashville resulted in disagreed juries, and the case was brought here on a change of venue.

28 New York Communists Arrested During Parade

New York, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Twenty-eight communists parading in a protest here against the fifth conference on the cause and cure of war at Washington were arrested today. They were charged with disorderly conduct.

Led by Mrs. Harriet Silverman, of the Workers International Association, the women formed two abreast in the street in front of the Women's Trade Union League, in Lexington avenue. They carried banners with communistic inscriptions. A crowd gathered and had begun to jeer at the women when police reserves arrived and broke up the demonstration. About half a dozen of the women escaped arrest.

'How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

TREATING STARCH INDIGESTION.

DR. ARTHUR I. KENDALL suggests a dietary treatment for the kind of so-called starch indigestion about which he has written occasionally during the last ten years. The condition is not a true starch indigestion, for digestion is fairly satisfactory. It is a group of symptoms of which low blood pressure, undue fatigue, lack of pep, constipation, and indefinite feelings of discomfort are a part. Probably most people who have this group of symptoms regard themselves as victims of low blood pressure. The condition is not serious in that it threatens life, or is followed by any serious organic disease, but it is disabling and destructive to the joy of living.

In Dr. Kendall's opinion the cause is too few lactic acid bacilli and too many of a certain gas bacillus in the intestinal tract. The gas bacillus causes the production of a substance that is at least closely related to histamin. Histamin lowers blood pressure.

The diet recommended for relief, if not cure, is one that is rich in lactic acid or, better still, one from which bacteria readily makes this acid. This gas bacillus does not thrive in the presence of lactic acid. The best article of diet is sour milk. Ordinary buttermilk, made by churning sweet cream, or even worse buttermilk made by churning well soured milk, should be all right. So is milk soured by the addition of a culture of lactic acid bacillus, so-called culture buttermilk. Lactic acid, taken as food or in beverages is good, but not equal to that made in the digestive tract by bacilli.

The diet should be rather low in the various sugars and in the starchy foods. In the selection of starchy foods, some experimenting is necessary. Some people eat potatoes without harm. Others can not eat potatoes, but they are comfortable after cereals.

Dr. Kendall tells us he has observed 90 cases of this disorder and has found this treatment satisfactory. He says nearly universal pasteurization is responsible for an increase in the prevalence of this type of low blood pressure or starch indigestion.

WHERE DOES HE GET IT?

M. D. writes:

1. Would you consider 16 ounces of brandy, whisky or 'shine too much for any man to drink per day?
2. Is there any danger of this amount of alcohol (taken each day with copious drafts of water) causing hardening of the liver, or destroying the kidneys, or affecting the brain?
3. Is a man of 40 better off with or without alcohol?
4. Does it harm a person to get intoxicated occasionally?

PRISON PROPOSALS WIN LABOR BACKING

Indorsement, However, Bars Convict-Made Goods in Competitive Sale.

QUEBEC SITUATION AIRED

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 17 (A.P.). As the last act of its midwinter session, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor today indorsed pending legislation for the construction of two new Federal prisons, with the proviso that any goods produced by labor in the prisons not be sold in regular commerce.

"We considered the measure carefully," said President William Green, and agreed that we would support such legislation, provided goods manufactured by the prisoners would be used by political subdivisions of the Government and not be placed in the position of invading the field of free labor."

The council also gave consideration to the existence of Catholic labor organizations in the Province of Quebec, Canada, where President Green said "there has been a little trouble."

"We do not believe that there is any justification for the existence of Catholic labor organizations in Quebec, as our own affiliated organizations there, we feel, can handle any situations arising there," said President Green.

The council passed on a report made by President Green on a recent investigation of labor conditions in Quebec relative to wages and working conditions and instructed the president to continue his inquiry and file an additional report at the next meeting of the council.

Adjournment of the convention was taken immediately after hearing reports by the secretary and treasurer, which were approved. The council will meet again in Washington next May.

Says 1929 Prosperous Year.

"The calendar year 1929 has been a prosperous one," states Joseph S. McCoy, United States Treasury actuary, writing on "Sources of Prosperity," in the January number of the American Bankers Association Journal. "It is true," he continues, "that the recent tangle on exchange at one time threatened to seriously interfere with our financial welfare. The foundation, however, upon which prosperity is built was too solid for this episode to upset or even to seriously weaken it.

"The calendar year 1928 was undoubtedly much more prosperous than was the year 1927. The best measure of prosperity is the incomes received by the people. This again is best measured by the income-tax returns. The "Statistics of Income for 1927" is the latest information we have as to returns of income, and the following is extracted therefrom:

Individual Incomes.

	Total Taxable Income Returned.	Net Tax.
1925	$17,471,219,362	$734,555,183
1926	17,422,632,572	732,470,790
1927	18,090,064,799	830,639,434

Corporate Incomes.

	Total Taxable Income Returned.	Net Tax.
1925	$9,563,683,697	$1,170,331,206
1926	9,673,402,889	1,229,797,243
1927	8,981,884,261	1,130,674,128

"The statistics for 1928 are not as yet compiled, while no returns for 1929 have as yet been made. These are to be made beginning March 15, next. The year for which the tax accrues is in general the calendar year. A considerable number of corporations and a comparatively small number of individuals, however, make returns upon a fiscal-year basis."

Check Payment Volume Gains.

The volume of check payments during the week ended January 11 was greater than in either the previous week or the same week last year, according to the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce. Receipts of wheat and cotton for the latest available week were lower than for the corresponding week of 1929. Cattle receipts and receipts of hogs were also lower than a year ago. The distribution of goods, as reflected by data on freight-car loadings covering the latest reported week, was lower than in the corresponding period of last year.

The general index of wholesale prices was fractionally higher than in the previous week, but was lower than a year ago. Cotton prices continued lower than last year, while the price for iron and steel, showing no material change from the previous week, was lower than last year.

Committees and sections will make reports at a meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association Monday afternoon. Reports for the full year will be made in June at the convention. Much interest will be centered in the report on trade and commercial activities, which will probably be heard by representatives of every bank in the city.

Bank Banquet Reservations.

The committee planning the banquet of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at the Willard Hotel, February 22, announced yesterday that reservations will be closed February 18. Last year's attendance was 820.

John E. Parker, of the brokerage house of G. M.-P. Murphy & Co., has been called from his desk by jury duty.

A. Elsey Waters, partner in Townsend, Scott & Co., Baltimore, was a visitor in the local financial district this week.

W. W. Spaid, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., is attending a meeting of the out-of-town section of New York Stock Exchange firms at New York this week. He was one of the organizers of the section and is now its vice president.

The Riggs Bank Club will hold a dance tonight at the Willard Hotel, the committee in charge being composed of George H. Morris, E. E. Fisher and W. E. Brooks, and the ladies' committee consisting of Mrs. Mildred F. Hoeke, Mrs. Elsie W. Botelér and Miss Eva Ricker. Mr. Yeoman and Mr. McClure, of the McLachlen Banking Corporation, who broadcast over Station WMAL, will furnish entertainment and dance music will be provided by Harvey Brase's orchestra.

ARLINGTON JURIST EXTOLLS DRY LAW

Education Is Now Needed on Prohibition Benefits, He Says.

SAYS COUNTRYSIDE SAFE

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 508. Clarendon, Va.

Speaking at the tenth anniversary celebration of the signing of the eighteenth amendment, held in the Mount Olivet Methodist Protestant Church at Ballston last night under the auspices of the Waverly Hills Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Judge Harry R. Thomas declared the police of Arlington County are enforcing the prohibition laws.

"We hear the cry the prohibition law can not be enforced," said Judge Thomas. "Put men in office who want the law enforced and it will be enforced," he said.

"Look back when there was no prohibition, with 47 saloons in Arlington County. It was not safe for a person to pass through Rosslyn or Jackson City at night, and on Sunday while the front doors were closed, the back ones were wide open. Those conditions do not exist today, which is evidence that conditions are far better," he said.

"What is now needed is more education on the benefits to be derived from the enforcement of prohibition," he said.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

"OH dear!" sighed Luella, a puzzled look on her face. "One really doesn't know what to believe."

"What're you trying to do, formulate a new credo?"

"No," she said, "just trying to get straightened out after all this drink stuff."

She surprised me.

"Have you been on a bender?"

"You know what I mean. I'm all confused."

"Muddled, eh?"

She nodded. "Worse than that," she admitted. "As a patriotic American, I try to believe our statesmen—but when they don't even agree among themselves, whattum I gonna do?"

"What-dye mean, they don't agree? And if they did agree, what good would they be? It takes two to make a bargain——"

"I'm not thinking about bargains now. It's prohibition that worries me——"

* * * *

"PROHIBITION? Luella!"

"Yes, prohibition. It is a vital question, isn't it?"

"If you mean a matter of life and death, I should think so—look at all the people dying to have a drink."

"And look at all of 'em who died because they had a drink," she flashed.

"Admitting all this, where does it get you?"

"That's just the trouble," sighed Luella. "It doesn't get anywhere. I don't know what to do. One side says prohibition works and is the solution of all our problems. Others say the country's all wet—literally and figuratively—and all our troubles are in solution. Oh, dear! Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

It is too bad, indeed; but there the question hangs. So I pleaded with Luella to forget it all, to form a club for the purpose of getting away from all these arguments.

"That's a good idea," she said, "I'll start today to organize."

"What'll you call it?"

* * * *

"I'LL have to be a comprehensive name and one broad enough to take in all parties——"

"Oh, are you going to invite both sides—the prohibitionists and the antiprohibitionists?"

"Yes," she answered, "and the Republicans, and the Democrats, and the progressives, and the conservatives, and the left-wing people and the right-wing gang, the regulars and the irregulars, the Young Guard and the Old——"

"Hold on there, lady; you're going to get in hot water——"

"That's a good name for it," she smiled; "we'll call it the Hot Water Brigade."

So there is trouble ahead.

HUDGINS, GREGORY WIN BENCH POSTS

Ten Others Are Eliminated in Spirited Balloting on Appeals Judgeships.

VICTORY COMES AT 2 A. M.

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17.—Judge E. W. Hudgins, of the Thirty-fourth judicial circuit, and Judge Herbert B. Gregory, of the Corporation Court of Roanoke, early today were nominated by the joint Democratic caucus of the Virginia General Assembly to fill the two vacancies on the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals bench, action tantamount to election.

The selection of the two men came after spirited balloting for almost seven hours shortly after 2 o'clock this morning in a fight generally regarded as the most intensive likely to develop during the present session of the General Assembly.

Choice of the two was made after ten other candidates for the posts, bearing support from various groups and various sections of the State, had been eliminated. Judge Hudgins finally was nominated soon after 2 o'clock, but reintroduction of several other names delayed majority action for Judge Gregory until about 2:30 o'clock, when he was selected over Judge O. L. Shackelford, of Norfolk Corporation Court No. 2, after elimination of the other contestants.

George L. Browning, of Orange, the only candidate in the race not a judge, led early ballots and for a time loomed as the possible choice bearing the solid backing of legislators from the Eighth Congressional district at the start.

Both judges nominated are prominent in the State, Judge Hudgins being especially well known also in Arlington County, where he was one of three judges named by the governor to try the recent annexation case between Alexandria and Arlington. He is 47 years old, a graduate of Richmond College, and a native of Buckingham County.

Judge Gregory, a graduate of Washington and Lee University, has had experience in law chancery work in Roanoke and on the circuit court bench. He was nominated bearing the indorsement of the bar associations of nine counties.

Naval Academy Host To Chinese Admiral

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17.—Admiral Hai Kuei Tu, ranking admiral of the Chinese navy and head of the naval mission from his country now on a tour of inspection of naval establishments in the United States, manifested deep interest in the departments of steam and electrical engineering on the occasion of his visit to the Naval Academy this afternoon. He was particularly impressed by models on exhibit.

The admiral was accompanied by his aids and secretaries and Lieut. Comdr. T. D. Carr, American aid, and arrived here shortly after 2 o'clock. He was received with military honors, and, following the inspection, he and his party were entertained at tea by Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robison, superintendent of the Academy, and Mrs. Robison before returning to Washington by motor.

Jail Breaker Captured By Officers in Romney

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 17.—Raymond Fletcher, who broke jail here early today, was found this afternoon by officers at Romney, W. Va., and was being held for Sheriff Pannett, of Frederick County. He was also in possession of an automobile belonging to Peyton J. Marshall, this city, believed by police to have been stolen by Fletcher in his get-away.

Fletcher escaped by digging a hole with a spoon in the wall of his third-story cell, making a rope from blanket strips, sliding down, and then climbing a radio antenna pole erected against the jail wall, and sliding down electric wires to the ground.

LEAF COOPERATIVE URGED FOR VIRGINIA

TIME IS RIPE FOR MOVE

Danville, Va., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—James C. Stone, Federal Farm Board member, in a public meeting especially for tobacco growers here this afternoon urged Virginia tobacco farmers to form immediately a tobacco cooperative marketing association.

His address was preceded by closed sessions this morning, when he privately conferred with a committee of tobacco growers. Resolutions were adopted requesting Senators Claude A. Swanson and Carter Glass, of Virginia, to cooperate with North and South Carolina senators in placing "the plight of tobacco growers before President Hoover, with a view to organizing a cooperative marketing body."

Organization of a cooperative marketing association, Mr. Stone said, was necessary, for "if farmers do not take steps in the near future to organize a marketing association, there will be little chance of them securing aid in marketing their 1930 crop, if they desire such aid."

Tobacco growers' progress is directly dependent upon either increase in their buying power or concentration of selling power in some central organization.

Referring to the discontinuance of the cooperative tobacco marketing association of Kentucky, of which he was head, Mr. Stone said its abandonment was caused by "opposition to the movement on the part of large tobacco buying interests."

"Conditions now," he said, "are different, and since legislation has been passed by Congress and the President, and all members of his Cabinet are in favor of the movement, now is the proper time for farmers to make moves for the organization of cooperatives."

$1,100 IS OBTAINED IN LEE HOME DRIVE

Campaign in Alexandria to Restore Birthplace Will Go On for Week.

RUM EVIDENCE SCORED

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The campaign which is now under way for funds for the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, which has for its purpose the purchase of Stratford, the birthplace of Gen. Lee, has so far realized $1,100, according to a report made yesterday by Mrs. Robert M. Reese, chairman, and George E. Warfield, treasurer, of the local committee.

The hostesses yesterday at headquarters were Mrs. Francis H. Fannon, Mrs. Charles W. Howell, Mrs. Thomas W. Robinson and Mrs. George H. Robinson. This morning Mrs. David Milton French, Mrs. Charles Ellett Cabell and Mrs. William J. Boothe will be in charge, and headquarters will be kept open until 10 o'clock tonight. Beginning today there was a "mite box" kept at headquarters, to receive small contributions.

The campaign will be conducted for another week, and the members of the local committee believe that the response of Alexandria will be large. Alexandria has a peculiar interest in Gen. Lee, not only because of the fact that he was the Confederate leader, but because his early manhood was spent here. He lived in the house on Oronoco street, between Washington and St. Asaph streets, received his early education in the Alexandria schools, and prepared for West Point here as well. He was a worshipper in Christ's Episcopal Church, where his pew is preserved with that of George Washington's.

The methods employed recently by Alexandria police in procuring evidence against persons engaged in the liquor traffic were scored yesterday in Police Court by Justice William S. Snow, when the case of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Soaper, 65 years old, living in Janney's Lane, was called. Justice Snow stated emphatically that he did not approve of obtaining evidence as was done in this case, and stated it would simply be a "crucifixion" to impose a jail sentence on the aged woman. A fine of $50 and costs was imposed, and Mrs. Soaper was given a month in which to pay the fine.

Policeman William Bayliss, Detective Sergt. Sims, and Policeman Posey, according to the testimony, went to the home of Mrs. Soaper on January 9, but were at first unsuccessful in purchasing liquor. They returned in the afternoon, however, at her behest, according to the testimony of Bayliss, and purchased two pints of whisky for $3, paying for it with money marked by Sergt. Sims, who waited outside.

Mrs. Soaper, on the witness stand, stated that the men came to her house and said they wanted liquor to make punch for a dance to be given that night, and gave the name of an acquaintance of Mrs. Soaper. She informed the officer, who was in civilian clothing, that she had no liquor, but added that if he return at 3 o'clock she might have some. She then explained she had found some whisky hidden in a swamp nearby, where it had evidently been left by a rumrunner. She procured this, she said, which was in a half-gallon jar, and sold it to the policeman.

Sydney Soaper, arrested with the aged woman, was acquitted, it being shown that he had nothing to do with the sale.

The sale of automobile licenses for 1930 here showed an increase of 350 over 1929, according to figures just compiled by J. Frank Carlin, local distributor. He has issued a total of 3,600 licenses for pleasure cars, 481 for trucks, and 48 for convertibles, and 353 chauffeurs' licenses. The total will be still further increased, a number of automobile owners having stored their cars temporarily. The time limit for the use of the 1929 tags expired at midnight Wednesday, and so far there have been no reports of arrests on account of the use of the old tags.

One of the last official acts of Gov. Harry Flood Byrd, who relinquished the reins of office as governor at noon Wednesday, was the reappointment of William S. Snow, civil and police justice of this city, to be a member of the commission on game and inland fisheries. The appointment, which is for four yaers, has been confirmed by the State Senate.

Judge Snow was originally appointed in 1926 by Gov. Byrd, and has taken an active interest in the affairs of the commission, being instrumental in securing the passage of legislation beneficial to this section.

NEW PAY RAISE PLAN URGED BY TEACHERS

Fairfax Association Adopts Proposal of Executive Committee.

POULTRY CONTEST SET

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Vienna, Va.
Phone Vienna 64.

At the meeting of the Fairfax County Teachers Association, at Falls Church, a letter prepared by the executive committee was read and approved by the teachers that asked the county school board to reconsider its proposed budget relative to teachers' salaries for next year to provide increases in salary based on merit, experience and type of teacher's certificate instead of a flat increase of $2 per month a year for five years, as proposed.

It was shown that a $2 per month increase would not necessarily keep efficient teachers in the county, which is the purpose of the board in making the increase.

Miss M. M. Snead, chairman of the executive committee, reported a plan to establish a literary league in this county to sponsor oratory, dramatics and better reading by means of an interhigh school contest. Spelling and other subjects will be used as basis of competition for lower grades. The senior high school principals present voted three to two in favor of such action.

Oratorical Contest Discussed.

There was a long discussion as to the advisability of discontinuing participation in the international oratorical contest. It was discovered that that Falls Church is the only county high school which plans to enter the contest this year.

The Floris School was not represented at this meeting so it is not known whether students there plan to participate or not. C. F. Northington, principal of the Herndon School, is to interview the principal of Floris in regard to formation of a literary league and if her vote ties, the subject will be dropped, but if she is in favor of the league, the president, Miss Dorothy Otley, will appoint a committee to organize a league within a short time.

A report of the primary teachers' meeting at the State convention in Richmond was given by Miss Julia Riedell. The high school conference was reported by Harris Nipe, of Oakton, with suggestion for development of the general physical and mental condition of the pupils. The principals' meeting was reported by Miss Otley, of Clifton.

New Bulletin Suggestions.

A vote of thanks was given to the chairman of the publicity committee for the first of the monthly teachers' bulletins. It was voted to include the percentage and names of honor roll pupils of each school in succeeding bulletins. A uniform standard was adopted for all honor rolls in this county. All pupils must receive a grade of B or higher in every subject, must grade at least B on deportment and must have a perfect attendance record with no tardiness. A committee consisting of C. F. Northington, of Herndon, as chairman; Mrs. Annie Robey Walker, of Herndon, and Miss R. DeButts, of Vienna, was appointed to solicit Fairfax County teachers to join the National Educational Association. A representative from the Washington office of the National Educational Association made an address on the aims and ideals of that organization.

A committee consisting of Miss Lulu Ferguson, of Vienna, chairman; Miss Agnes Donaldson, of Lee Jackson; Miss B. F. Hibbs, of McLean, and Mrs. E. W. Middleton, of Floris, was appointed to inquire into the percentage of teachers in the county who have paid their quota for the State teachers' preventorium. Each teacher in the State is supposed to contribute $4 during her teaching experience to the tuberculosis preventorium fund. This entitles them to all privileges of the Charlottesville Preventorium, in case of need.

This committee will secure cards from the institution and send to each teacher, with the hope of securing 100 per cent payment for the county before the next quarterly meeting. The executive committee has voted to recommend an amendment to the association's constitution, which provides that officers shall be elected at the May meeting instead of in September. It is hoped to arrange for some action on this amendment at the May meeting.

The committee in charge of the turkey dinner which will be given by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department January 30 in the old Fairfax Tavern met yesterday in the board room at the courthouse and completed the arrangements. It was reported that several turkeys and other supplies have been donated for this supper. The proceeds will be used to help pay expenses of the local department.

Miss Sara E. Thomas, county home demonstration agent, is making plans for a poultry contest for adults instead of the usual home or kitchen contest. All owners of home flocks are invited to enter the competition. The services of a poultry specialist from Blacksburg, Va., have been obtained and he will be in the county January 30, 31 and February 7, on which days flocks of those who have entered the contest will be scored. They will be scored again at a later date to ascertain if any improvement has been made. Persons desiring to enter this contest should communicate with Miss Thomas at Fairfax before January 30. These contests are being held in an effort to improve quality of the poultry flocks in the county. Prizes will be awarded to winners.

Questions pertaining to milk production and marketing of dairy products will be discussed at a meeting of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Association with county demonstration agents for the territory of Maryland and Virginia in the vicinity of Washington this afternoon in the offices of the Association in Washington.

The Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department voted to join the proposed Fairfax County Volunteer Fireman's Association at the regular monthly meeting the constitution and by-laws of the proposed association were read and discussed, and when the ballot was taken it was almost unanimous.

The Robert E. Lee Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at Falls Church, will hold its annual Robert E. Lee birthday celebration this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Harry A. Fellows, president of the chapter. Invitations to attend have been extended to the Arlington County Chapter. John W. Rust, of Fairfax, president of the Bull Run Battlefield Association, has been invited to make an address on the life of Gen. Lee.

Maryland's Flying Baby Meets Baltimore Mayor

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Helen Steinmetz, 7 weeks old, Maryland's baby flier, was introduced to Mayor Boening today by Mrs. Leo Steinmetz, who had adopted her. Helen is a mystery baby. Recently an airplane alighted at the Steinmetz Airways on the Annapolis road, carrying two men, supposedly from New York. After they had refilled their gasoline tank and closely inspected an airplane on the field, they winged away. Then the baby was found in the idle plane.

A hand-written note, on Waldorf-Astoria Hotel stationery, New York, addressed to Miss Julia—Mrs. Leo Steinmetz, 717 West North avenue, bore this message:

"Dear Miss Julia—Last year when you were in New York you visited an infant home to find a baby you would like to adopt. None suited you. Here is a little one, of good parentage, no unhappy prenatal tendencies—but she may not be permitted to stand in line of succession.

"We are leaving her in your airplane so that you may have no means of tracing her. We know you will love and care for her. Be assured you will not regret having her. Auld Lang Syne."

Mrs. Steinmetz, formerly Miss Julia Neville Kelley, is proud of her baby flier.

VIRGINIA GUARDSMEN SEE IMPROVEMENT

Annual Report Stresses Year's Betterment of Personnel.

EFFICIENCY NOW BETTER

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Improvements in the Virginia National Guard, both as to efficiency and personnel, are noted for the last four years in the departmental data included in the annual report of the Byrd administration.

The guard has been successfully maintained at approximately its authorized strength, fully equipped for field service, according to the report, and its rising popularity has resulted in improved and enlarged personnel.

Reports of inspections required by the Federal Government to be made by regular Army officers annually have been generally "satisfactory" or "very satisfactory," although several have been "unsatisfactory," with the result that they were reorganized as soon as possible. There have always been at least six places applying for military organizations, the report continues.

Equipment Steadily Available.

The National Guard has sufficient field equipment on hand for emergency, with the remainder stored at warehouses in Richmond and the State military reservation at Virginia Beach, where necessary supplies can be shipped on demand. This policy, the report declares, is a great money saver in freight, and since its adoption in 1927 Virginia has been allotted funds by the United States Military Bureau for two storehouses, one completed last year and the other now under construction.

The biggest question confronting the National Guard administration, according to the report, is the assignment to various localities of Federal property to the value of over $2,000,000. Until 1929 the militia bureau required property inventories to be made by regular Army instructors, and these were accepted by the State headquarters.

In 1929, however, the report continues, the Federal Government did not require an inventory and so neither an audit nor complete check could be taken, State funds for this purpose being unavailable.

Says Inspections Necessary.

"It has been found that, notwithstanding quarterly certificates of property by company commanders, it is essential that inspections be regularly made by a representative from this headquarters, in order to insure strict accountability," says the report. "As often as money is available such inspections have been ordered, but limited funds will not admit of as many inspections as are considered necessary."

Property officers are required to furnish small personal bond, the report states, the premium being paid by the State, in order to cover any depletion of property that may exist upon final check or transfer of property.
